GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH TERRITORY, Wednesday, March 28, 1855.

With this you will receive and lay before your readers the result of the trial of the Indians concerned in the massacre of Capt. J. W. GUNNISON and party.

The verdict of manslaughter rendered by the Jury is such an infamous outrage upon justice, so contrary to the letter and spirit of the law, and so grievous an insult to the friends of the lamented dead, and to the good cause of every well judging man, that I cannot refrain from giving you, as briefly as possible, an accurate history of the case.

You will, I believe, appreciate the importance of its being communicated to the public, with such comments as you may deem pertinent to the subject.

Capt. JOHN W. GUNNISON, U. S. Army, with a small detachment of his surveying party, was massacred on the morning of the 26th October, 1853, by a band of Pah-vant Utes. In the Spring of 1854, as early as practicable, a strong force of artillery and dragoons, under command of Col. E. J. STEPTOE, was ordered to cross the plains, winter in Salt Lake Valley, and at any cost bring to justice the perpetrators of this brutal murder.

Colonel STEPTOE, acting under instructions from the War Department, visited, with a party of dragoons, the Pah-vants in Fillmore Valley, in October last. Before proceeding on this duty he advised with Gov. BRIGHAM YOUNG, who gave it as his deliberate conviction that no satisfaction could be obtained from those Indians for the massacre of Capt. GUNNISON and party, in any other way than by offering a few presents to the Chiefs WAR-KAR and KA-NO-SHE, for the reason that an armed force would be discovered, no matter how secretly it should move, and that the Indians would at once betake themselves to the Cañons, where many thousands of men could not find them, or if found they would be so posted that no force could dislodge them.

The Colonel acted upon this advice, and in a private "talk" with KA-NO-SHE, assured him that he would never be able to satisfy the President, unless by surrendering for trial at least a portion of those engaged in the massacre.

In every point of view it was greatly to be desired that this plan should succeed—especially as the Southern settlements were in no condition for a war with the Pah-vants, however feeble the latter might be—that the United States troops wintering in Great Salt Lake City, 150 miles distant, would be unable to aid the settlers efficiently, and that the Southern Mail route to California (the only reliable one out of the Territory,) would probably be intercepted in the event of hostilities.

This demand upon the Pah-vant Chief was complied with—so far as his power over his tribe enabled him—and the Indians surrendered, six in number, were delivered by Col. STEPTOE to the civil authority for trial before the United States Court, Gov. YOUNG's action in the affair notwithstanding. He had fully discharged his duty to the Government, and it only remained for an impartial Jury to pass upon the guilt or innocence of the accused. The Grand Jury of Juab County found a true bill of indictment against three of the Indians delivered up by their Chief. They were put upon their trial. The evidence is before your readers, notwithstanding the notorious fact that the witnesses were tampered with by Col. SARPITY, the counsel for the defence, and a tool of BRIGHAM YOUNG. Their guilt was proven beyond the shadow of a doubt.

The Jury was instructed by the Court that under no circumstances could any other verdict than one of murder in the first degree, or of acquittal, be found. They returned a verdict of manslaughter, and the prisoners were sentenced to the Penitentiary for three years—the extent of the law.

The secret of this most unrighteous verdict we have strong reasons for believing to be simply this: The Jury were commanded, or (as the Mormon slang is,) "counseled" by BRIGHAM YOUNG to find this verdict—and they did it, notwithstanding their solemn oaths before God to find according to the law, the testimony, and the instructions of the Court. They disregarded all these considerations, and obeyed the dictates of their pretended prophet, priest and king. This is not a vagary of the imagination, but as we believe a fact, not only incontestible, but uncontested. It has been openly stated, since the trial, by old and well-informed Mormons, that "The oath of supremacy to BRIGHAM YOUNG, their prophet, is paramount to every other," and that "The Jury acted by BRIGHAM's counsel, and they were right in so doing, for BRIGHAM YOUNG is the mouth-piece of God." We are gravely told that BRIGHAM had a revelation the evening before the Court left Salt Lake City for Nephi City, where it was to sit, and that the next morning in accordance with his instructions from his elder brother, Jesus Christ, BRIGHAM dispatched a special messenger with instructions to the Jury. Is there no limit to blasphemy and credulity? I was present during the trial, and know that a confidential agent of BRIGHAM was there, acting under secret instructions, and in my presence it was charged upon one of the Jury that this agent, (one HUNTINGTON,) had had access to them, and had communicated to them BRIGHAM YOUNG's orders. This charge was not denied. It was even said to the District-Attorney, Gen. HOLLMAN, (to whom much praise is due for his exertions in the case,) that "no matter what amount of testimony had been introduced, the verdict would have been the same."

It is a notorious fact here that a strong effort was made by Gov. YOUNG to get these Indian prisoners out of the hands of the military authority. He ordered the prosecuting attorney of Salt Lake County, Mr. CARRINGTON, a Mormon—by the authority of the Priesthood—to take out a writ of habeas corpus and remove the prisoners from Col. STEPTOE's custody. The Associate Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court for this Territory, to whom the application was made, very properly refused to issue the writ, as there was no ground for it. Here then we have a Governor of a Territory using the influence of his office to defeat the execution of the laws; more than this, commanding and inducing a Jury to perjure themselves before God and men. It is to go forth to the people of the United States that eight American citizens may be murdered in Utah in cold blood, and a Mormon Jury shall find it killing without malice, for BRIGHAM YOUNG has said it, and he is the mouth-piece of God. Much of the other side of the question. A few months ago, two Mormon boys were killed in one of the Cañons near this city. BRIGHAM intended the trial. On eight testimony two Indians were convicted and hung. A United States officer and seven of his associates are hunted in the face of day, and BRIGHAM YOUNG through a perjured Jury, declares it before high Heaven to be only manslaughter.

No words can do justice to the indignation of the few American citizens here. The Mormon community is damned with a curse "too deep to tell." They are alien and inimical to the parent Government in every point of view. We desire that this statement should go before the country, that the people may reflect upon this monster of Mormonism, and see in its true light its nature and intention. No greater crime can be committed than to substitute the authority of man for the justice of God; and BRIGHAM YOUNG has done this. Is he not capable of any infamy? It is believed by those most capable of judging, that nothing but the strongest measures can avert a terrible evil. The Mormon community have never been able to refrain from the greatest outrages upon society. The crime in Missouri, Illinois, and in Utah, has been marked by no change but from bad to worse,—from prisoners to crime. Let the separate organization of Utah be abolished, and her broad and beautiful valleys be portioned out between Nebraska, New-Mexico and California. Then, and then only, with the aid of strong military force, can the law have its legitimate supremacy among this God-forsaken community.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, March 22, 1855.

DEAR SIR: Inasmuch as the Indians recently tried for the murder of the lamented GUNNISON and party were captured by you, an official statement of the result is eminently proper. You will recollect that soon after your arrival in this city, we had frequent interviews relative to the best method to be adopted to bring the perpetrators of that atrocious crime to justice. You manifested the greatest possible desire to carry out the instructions conferred upon you by the War Department; and while you were determined to hold the guilty parties to a strict accountability, the only question was how could this desirable result be best accomplished. You finally adopted the plan advised by the Superintendent of Indian Affairs, Governor BRIGHAM YOUNG, and succeeded in obtaining, through the Chief of the Pah-vant Utes, six prisoners, whom he alleged were concerned in the massacre. Three of these only were indicted, and the others were discharged. The trial was held at the city of Nephi, Hon. J. F. KINNEY presiding. Lieut. MOWRY, of the United States Army, assisted me in the prosecution. The defence was conducted by A. W. BARRITT, Esq. The testimony against the prisoners was clear, unequivocal and conclusive. It appeared that the prisoners and others were near the Sevier River hunting game, when the American party were about to camp for the night. On discovering them the Indians said, "These are the Americans, let us go and kill them." They went to their own camp, made preparation for the attack and started off in the direction of the unfortunate party, near sun down, armed with guns, bows and arrows. A squaw who testified with the prisoners, remained behind, and about sunrise heard the firing of guns. In a few hours afterwards the prisoners and others returned with much booty, saying that they had killed the Americans. It was also satisfactorily proven by the testimony of two citizens and the chief of the prisoners, that they had acknowledged that they assisted in killing the Americans. The Government having thus established, beyond a doubt, the guilt of the prisoners, rested. The defence also acted without introducing a witness or attempting to impeach the testimony of the prosecution. We had little else to do in summing up, except refer to the testimony and law. The defence relied upon one, that the prisoners were ignorant savages, and as they, at some previous time, had one of their number killed by the whites, (of which, however, there was not a particle of proof,) therefore, according to their customs, they have a right to avenge his death by taking life. Mr. BARRITT also contended that the Jury could only bring in a verdict of manslaughter. He spoke at great length, and under much excitement. The Court charged the Jury upon the necessity of divesting their minds of all prejudice against the prisoners, as well as all feelings of sympathy in their behalf. That they are as much amenable for a violation of the criminal law as are their more fortunate white brethren—that the act of Congress, extended over the Territory, brought within their influence the Indian and the citizen. That the position assumed by the counsel for the prisoners was no defence in law. The Court, further explained to the jury at some length the different grades of homicide, and concluded, by informing them, that, under the law, they could not bring in a verdict of manslaughter; that the testimony clearly established the fact that the crime was not committed in the sudden heat of blood, and the jury must either bring in a verdict of guilty of murder, or acquit the prisoners.

Notwithstanding the solemn and impressive charge of the Court, the Jury, after a few hours' deliberation, to the astonishment of the Court and all others who heard the trial, brought in a verdict of "Manslaughter."

Whereupon the Court sentenced the prisoners to three years' confinement in the Penitentiary, the extent of law.

This is the final result of all your energy, perseverance and anxiety to bring to merited punishment the perpetrators of one of the most inhuman and cold-blooded murders on record. There is a fearful account ability awaiting that Jury. Whether they alone are responsible the future will discover.

Accept, dear Sir, my sincere acknowledgements and profound gratitude for the assistance you rendered and the deep solicitude you manifested in bringing to trial those whose lives were justly claimed by the stern demands of the law.

Respectfully your obedient servant,

JOSEPH HOLLMAN,

U. S. District Attorney, Territory of Utah.

Col. E. J. STEPTOE, U. S. A.

Full Report of the Testimony, Argument, Verdict, &c., &c.

Reported specially for the New-York Daily Times.

NEPHI CITY, Utah Territory, March 21, 1855.

The trial of three Indians—ANKER JOINT, SANDY HAIR and WHITE TREE—for the murder of John W. GUNNISON and seven other citizens of the United States, has just been held in the United States Court for the Second Judicial District, Hon. Chief-Justice KINNEY presiding.

JOSEPH HOLLMAN, Esq., District Attorney, and Lieut. SYLVESTER MOWRY, of the U. S. Army, appeared as counsel for the United States, and Hon. A. W. BARRITT for the defence.

The Court-room was crowded with spectators at the opening of Court, all evincing a great interest.

The Jury having been duly empanneled and sworn, and the Judge having refused two motions made by the counsel for the defence—one to dismiss the case, on the ground of the Court having no jurisdiction, and one to quash the indictment—the District Attorney opened the case for the United States to the Jury, briefly, but effectively.

He was followed by Col. BARRITT for the prisoners, who stated that the defence set up by him would be that the Indians could not be guilty of murder, as they were at war with the United States and with the people of the Territory of Utah.

GEORGE BLOCK, a witness for the prosecution, being duly sworn, said: I saw Capt. GUNNISON and party at Fillmore City in the Fall of 1853; in October, I believe; there were no other Americans or emigrants in the vicinity at that time; heard Capt. G. say he was going to survey Sevier Lake and Provo Canon, and then go into Walker's country; in five or six days after this, Capt. MORRIS came to Fillmore and said GUNNISON was killed; went down with others, after being ordered by BRIGHAM YOUNG, to bury the dead; found an arrow-spike in CARRINGTON's backbone; recognized Capt. GUNNISON by his hair; took particular notice of it when he was at Fillmore; hair was dark and slightly sprinkled with gray; this was in October, I think, 1853, in Millard County; I know the prisoners, ANKER JOINT and SANDY HAIR; do not know WHITE TREE; saw both of them on the ground when we went to bury the dead; they made no connection to me; I saw KANOSH cap on an Indian's head; with a dragoon sword in the possession of an Indian; MCCALL identified the Indians the shirts to the GUNNISON's wagon; ANKER JOINT's brother came down into the Sevier River and met a horse in the wagon, and the Indians all mounted and galloped in out.

Cross-examined—About a week after the murder, having I was on the ground, the dogs had brought off the bones by the wolves; should positively not know the remains of Capt. GUNNISON I saw; I know the skull; could not say whether it was blood; gave the hair to Mr. GRAY, who probably sent it to Washington.

TO THE JURY—There were the bones of eight men, being duly sworn, says: I saw seven or eight of GUNNISON's party in October, 1853; saw Capt. GUNNISON at Mr. HOVE's; remarked his appearance particularly; he had his hair cut, and I took special notice of his hair; it was dark, and a little tinged with gray; this was about a week before the massacre; went down to bury the dead; saw what I believed to be the remains of Capt. G.; saw ANKER JOINT and SANDY HAIR; have heard ANKER JOINT say he helped to kill the Americans on the Sevier. (The witness here described the position of the place of massacre, and how the Indians could approach under cover of the brushwood.) The bodies were scattered for a mile or two; no one in one place; ANKER JOINT said he was there and helped in the massacre; saw SANDY HAIR with "leggings" made of an overcoat belonging to one of the Gunnison party; all the Indians helped get out the wagon.

Cross-Examination—Cannot exactly say what day of the month it was; about a week after the murder we went down to bury the bodies; we escaped the interruptions from BRIGHAM; took us part of two days to get ANSON CALL, GEORGE BLOCK, and seven or eight others went; CALL took the lead; KA-NO-SHE, Chief of the Pah-vant Utes, went with us; could not say KA-NO-SHE ordered the Indians to get out the wagon; did not go to the "wick-i-ups" (lodges) the Indians came down; KA-NO-SHE did not go for them; distinctly asked ANKER JOINT if he helped to kill the Americans; said he did; could not swear positively to the leggings, but believes them to have come from the Gunnison party; resided in Fillmore, October, 1853; no other Americans were killed then Fall.

TO THE JUDGE—The Indians were armed when they came to us; saw no blood on their arms.

TO THE JURY—The party had evidently run for their lives, and were slaughtered by the Indians while running.

JOHN KING, a witness for the prosecution, being duly sworn, said: I knew Capt. GUNNISON in September 1853; he then said he was going down to the Sevier River; five or six days after the murder, I accompanied a party to the place of massacre; saw on the ground bloody arrows, broken; saw an arrow point in the back of one of the bodies; heard ANKER JOINT say he helped to kill them; I did not know the bodies or the property; the remains were near the river; no bullets were found—plenty of arrows; no other Americans were killed that Fall; ANKER JOINT's confession was entirely voluntary.

Cross-Examination—I asked ANKER JOINT if he helped to kill them; he said yes; the Pah-vant village was not far from the camp of the G. party; the Pah-vants are not in the habit of boasting of this murder; don't talk much about it; think this was in October, 1853; KA-NO-SHE gave no orders to the Indians to get out the wagon.

S. P. HOYT, a witness for the prosecution, being duly sworn, says: I know all of the prisoners; knew Capt. GUNNISON in the Fall of 1853; he said he was going to survey Sevier Lake; I loaned a draft for him, partly in American gold; saw part of this gold which I recognized afterwards, in the hands of some of these Indians.

AR-WICH, (Midsummer) an Indian woman, a witness for the prosecution, being duly sworn.

The counsel for the defence demanded the usual oath to be put. So learned Judge explained to her in simple but forcible language, the importance of the truth. She replied through a sworn interpreter that she understood perfectly, and would tell the whole truth. The oath having been again administered, MIDSUMMER says: I know all three of the prisoners; was in camp when Mr. CALL came down; ANKER JOINT was not among them at the time of the murder; ANKER JOINT was not among the Indians; saw first saw the Americans coming; he ran and told the rest of the band; they all said let us go and kill the Americans; they had a big talk, started when dark, and all them of the prisoners went along; I remained in camp and did not see them shoot; when they came back they said they had killed the Americans; they had with them watches, blankets, cartridges, &c.; the prisoners came back with the band; ANKER JOINT had a blanket, a pair of pistols, and several other things; WHITE TREE had a ring; don't remember about SANDY HAIR having anything; they had their bows and arrows; brought back no scalps.

Cross-Examination—This was twenty two Winters ago; there were twenty-four warriors and three squaws; (here the witness gave the names of the squaws;) don't remember the names of the warriors except SAME-AN, who made a big talk before they started; he is not a Chief, but a relation of the Chief who had been killed by a party of whites some time before; the band stayed in the evening and returned next day about half past twelve o'clock; (MIDSUMMER told the time by saying the sun was at a certain place which she indicated;) the murder took place not far from their wick-i-ups (lodges); I was offered no presents to be a witness; I was simply told to come with the other prisoners, and I came; GEORGE BEAR, the interpreter, gave me the dress I have on; no one else has given me anything; I have no man here—I have a child; NA-AW-GUR-RE-OH, my husband, is a fighting Chief; he was in the massacre.

DIRECT EXAMINATION RESUMED—I heard the firing during the killing of the Americans; it was in the gray dawn, before the sunrise.

The witness, AR-WICH, is a pleasant looking squaw, about 20 years old. She gave her testimony readily and clearly, and appeared very cheerful. Once she laughed, and ARROW-PIER, the brother and successor of the great WALKER, Chief of all the Ute Indians, spoke to her in their own dialect, telling her to be serious and not laugh, and to tell the whole truth. Her testimony being of great importance to the prosecution, was looked for with much anxiety—every one seemed satisfied that she had told nothing but the truth. Exertions had been made by certain parties well known to the counsel for the United States, to tamper with this witness, but their infamy has only recoiled on their own heads. Much credit is due to General HOLLMAN, the District Attorney, for the ability displayed here as well as throughout the case.

KA-NO-SHE, Chief of the Pah-vants, a witness for the prosecution, being duly sworn, says: I know all three of the prisoners; did not know GUNNISON; know Americans were murdered on the Sevier River seventeen or eighteen moons ago; was on the spot five days after the murder; found there the bones of seven men—no flesh on them; all three prisoners were there at the time; ANKER JOINT and WHITE TREE said they had shot arrows at the Americans who were killed; the message took place about a day and a half's journey from Fillmore; I found an arrow point in the back-bone of one of the bodies; no other Americans were killed on the Sevier River before or since.

CROSS-EXAMINATION—I delivered the prisoners up to Col. STEPTOE, (the great American Captain;) GEORGE BEAR, the interpreter, told me to do it; gave six men and one squaw; I gave up the blind prisoner because he had only one eye; (the Grand Jury found a bill against only three, of these five;) I gave up the squaw because the fighting chief told me to do so; I gave up SANDY HAIR because he said he shot arrows at the Americans; I am the head chief of the Pah-vants; made the band give up CAPT. G.'s property to Mr. CALL; the warriors of my tribe do not always mind me; I did not order the prisoners to confess; they told me without asking them; I did not tell them they would only be whipped and sent back with presents to the tribe; I told them I shot them away, never to come back to their nation any more; there were two fighting chiefs concerned in this massacre; the warriors were not chiefs or obey them, and were often rebellious; they are now beginning to learn.

KA-NO-SHE gave his testimony with much reluctance—failed to understand the interpreter at first. He had evidently been tampered with. ARROW-PIER told him not to mind the lawyers, but to tell the truth, and if the prisoners were guilty to let them suffer. KA-NO-SHE then told the same story he has uniformly told heretofore, but evidently with great pain, particularly regarding SANDY HAIR, a handsome YOUNG WARRIOR, straight as a spring and graceful as a fawn.

Col. BARRITT, a chief and guide to KA-NO-SHE, was then for the prosecution, being duly sworn, says: I know the prisoners; have heard it said they were concerned in the murder; they never confessed to me to me.

The interpreter would correct more from him, and he was allowed to go down. He also had been tampered with, and it was well done, for many times before the trial he acknowledged the name that KA-NO-SHE mentioned. A very sharp "war of words" took place between Gen. HOLLMAN and Lieut. MOWRY for the United States, and Col. BARRITT, the counsel for the defence, in which Lieut. M. charged Col. B., in no measured terms with disgraceful and infamous conduct in tampering with KA-NO-SHE and PAH-A-SHUNY. Col. BARRITT denied the charge very indignantly, but upon Gen. HOLLMAN putting a question of the witness to show the fact of unlawful interference, Col. BARRITT objected in the strongest terms. Gen. HOLLMAN stated to the Court his conviction that the witness had been tampered with, and that he only wished to show by whom. The matter was hotly averred here by KA-NO-SHE coming to his senses and telling the truth. Some excitement was created in Court by this little episode. The testimony for the prosecution here closed. Col. BARRITT stated that his defence would rest on the fact of a war existing between the Indians and the people of the Territory, and called a witness to prove this.

His was overruled by the Court.

Col. BARRITT argued the case at some length. The point raised that the ground of defence was untenable, and read from the United States Statutes in support of the ruling.

The counsel for the prisoners then said he had no witnesses to call, and the case closed for the defence.

ARGUMENTS OF COUNSEL.

Lieut. SYLVESTER MOWRY, of the U. S. A., associate counsel for the prosecution, opened the case to the Jury. This, I am informed, was his first speech in the United States Court. It is but due to Lieut. MOWRY to say that his argument was forcible, comprehensive and eloquent. Mr. M. reviewed the testimony with great accuracy, introduced and applied the authorities with a professional skill and dignity that would have done honor to an experienced lawyer.

In short, Lieut. M.'s entire argument was a happy forensic effort—replete with good sense, apt illustrations and legal deductions—which I think convinced all who heard it, that there was no alternative but for the Jury to bring in a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree.

Hon. A. W. BARRITT, for the defence, addressed the Jury for nearly two hours, with his usual ability. He commented but slightly on the testimony, confining himself to answering the more salient points of Lieut. MOWRY's argument. He reviewed only that part of the testimony touching the identity of the remains found on the Sevier River—and with more ingenuity than soundness, argued that the testimony failed to show with accuracy that the remains were those of the persons mentioned in the indictment. He appealed to the Jury with the usual pathos applied on such occasions, but it was endeavoring to raise too heavy a weight of law and evidence to allow him to indulge in anything more than plausible, but ingenious generalities.

Col. BARRITT displayed during his argument many of those peculiarities which made him so famous in the Mormon Church years ago when he was an "Elder in Israel." Although he has since fallen from grace, he has lost little of his original strength—and it is said by old "Saints" that he can now preach a better sermon than BRIGHAM YOUNG. He was listened to with marked attention by Court, Jury, and audience.

The District Attorney, Gen. HOLLMAN, summed up for the prosecution, in one of the closest and best digested arguments I have ever listened to. With great courtesy, but unerring skill, he reviewed Col. BARRITT's position, and one by one destroyed the illusions that the counsel for the defence had created. Col. BARRITT had repeated the numerous stories which originated in the morbid brain of some fanatical "Saint," relecting on the character of Capt. MORRIS, who commanded the escort of Capt. GUNNISON's party. In forcible language Gen. HOLLMAN depicted the situation of the Southern settlements—their defenceless position in the event of the Indian war. He showed conclusively that Capt. MORRIS conducted in the trying emergency in which he was placed, was dictated by the strongest and best reasons, and that in leaving the execution of justice on the murderers of Capt. GUNNISON and party, to the civil authority, he sacrificed his own feelings to the good of the community.

The evidence was reviewed in the most masterly manner; link by link, the circumstances as sworn by witnesses were taken up and formed into a chain, which encircled the prisoners with iron folds. Gen. HOLLMAN spoke about fifty minutes, and, to quote the the language of the Chief Justice, "There was not a superfluous word in his whole argument."

Chief Justice KINNEY charged the Jury with the clearness for which he is noted. After the usual instructions, he reviewed the testimony, and specially charged [illegible] only a verdict of murder in the first degree, or of acquittal, could be found; that it was clearly shown that the guilty at all it was [illegible] the law; that the fact of premeditation was clearly proven. He complimented Col. BARRITT on the ability displayed by him in the management of the defence, and with an earnest comment on the importance of the case, he dismissed the Jury to the deliberation of their verdict.

The Jury was out only four hours—and brought in a verdict of "Manslaughter."

Lieut. MOWRY stated to the Court that as the verdict was contrary to the law, the testimony, and the instructions of the Court, he desired the Jury to be asked individually, if they "understood the meaning of their verdict under the United States statutes, and if their finding was killing without malice." The Jury replied that such was their verdict. The prisoners were sentenced to three years' imprisonment, the extent of the law.

In passing sentence, the Court remarked to the prisoners, that under the law the Jury should have taken away their lives, but they had spared them. He warned them not to take this "mercy" as impunity, for a righteous a verdict would, under like circumstances, visit upon them the death they so richly merited.

The learned Judge stated in dismissing the Jury, that it was customary for the Court to indulge in such remarks as seemed fitting the occasion. He said, "A special term of Court has been called for a trial of great moment to the people of this territory, and of great interest to the people of the United States. That the case for the United States had been clearly made out, but the jury, contrary to the law, the testimony, the instructions of the Court, and in violation of their solemn oath before God, had found a verdict of manslaughter. Although the Grand Jury had other business to present, he felt it his duty to say, that in view of these facts the Court had no other business there, and it was therefore adjourned, sine die."

This case has been reported for the press by a gentleman specially appointed by the Court. The evidence has been compared with the notes of counsel, and found correct. The notices of the arguments of counsel are from the pen of the reporter, with the exception of the one referring to Lieut. MOWRY's opening to the Jury, which was written by Chief Justice KINNEY and handed to the reporter by him, with a request that it should be embodied in the proceedings.

THE TURF FOR 1855.

Trotting at Union Course, L. I.

Yesterday afternoon, two trotting matches came off at the Union Course, Long Island. They were witnessed by a large audience, who manifested a great interest in the $2,000 match. The race was announced as follows:

UNION COURSE, L. I.—TROTTING.—May 17, at 3 P. M., a match for $2,000, mile heats, best three in five; wagons and drivers to weigh 200 pounds. WILLIAM WEBSTER names s. m. Miller's Damsel; S. HOGELAND names b. g. John Wesley.

Also a trotting match for $1,000, mile heats, best three in five, to harness. Mr. PRAFOOT names g. g. Mark McGuire, Mr. H. WOODRUFF names b. m. Angelina.

The sport of the first trot was soon added, as the Damsel distanced the gelding on the first heat. This result astonished many of those who favored Mr. HEAD, LAKE and the horse John Wesley, but it was evident the horse was no match for the mare, and the judges at once decided the contest in favor of Miller's Damsel.

The g. g. Mark McGuire was the victor in the match with Angelina, which he won with perfect ease. There was but little betting on either side, which was probably owing to the majority of those present being in the service of the drivers.

The twenty mile race against time will no doubt take place next week, and Flora Temple in the horse selected to perform the feat.

Injunction Against an Insurance Company—The Personal Liberty Bill.

BOSTON, Thursday, May 17.

In the Supreme Court this morning a hearing was had for an injunction asked for by the Insurance Commissioners against the People's Mutual Insurance Company of Boston. It is alleged that the officers of the Company are bankrupt, whose interest is the concern is a policy of insurance for $600 worth of clothing; that they, to pay off the liabilities of the Company, have made an assessment of $250,000, on which they have received $6,000, nearly all of which they have themselves received in the form of salaries; that demands against the Company cannot be collected; that there have been false entries on the books, &c. The Court decided to hear evidence on these charges on Monday next, when, if true, an injunction would be granted.

The bill known as the Personal Liberty bill, containing certain stringent regulations in regard to the Fugitive Slave law was taken up in the House to-day, and an amendment adopted forbidding any State officers from holding the office of United States Commissioner. A motion to strike out of the bill the section which authorizes any attorney who acts for a slave claimant from practicing in the State Courts was rejected by a large majority. The bill was then passed. Yeas, 209; Nays, 43. It has before passed the Senate, only three voting in the negative.

The Case of Joseph Hiss.

BOSTON, Thursday, May 17.

The case of JOSEPH HISS, arrested yesterday for debt, was brought before the Supreme Court this forenoon, and on motion of the plaintiff's counsel the writ of habeas corpus was dismissed. The proceeding is said to have originated on the ground that Judge SHAW would require a sworn affidavit that the white cane was genuine and not the trumped up for purposes otherwise than the collection of a debt. This is probably the last public appearance of JOSEPH HISS.

Cattle Market—Sheep-of-war Jamestown.

BALTIMORE, Thursday, May 17.

One hundred Beef Cattle offered to-day. Market dull, but no change in prices. Forty head left over. The balance sold at prices ranging from $10 50 to $12 50 net. Hogs have advanced from 25c. to 50c., with sales at $7@7 75 per hundred.

A Savannah dispatch to the Richmond Dispatch says that when the Jamestown was at Key West the division between the ward-room and the gun-deck was taken down, so as to clear the whole deck for action; which is not usually done except in time of war. It is conjectured from this fact that our relations with Spain are in a critical condition.

The Episcopal Convention.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, May 17.

In the Episcopal Convention to-day a Committee was appointed to inquire into the expediency of dividing the Diocese, and the appointment of an Assistant Bishop, as recommended in the pastoral charge of Bishop POTTER.

Railroad Thieves Arrested.

SPRINGFIELD, Thursday, May 17.

Eight employés on the Western Railroad, in this city, were arrested to-day for stealing from the freight cars. The officers are in search of others.

Great Fire at Evansville, Ind.

LOUISVILLE, Wednesday, May 16.

A large fire occurred at Evansville, Ind., this morning, destroying sixteen valuable buildings. The total loss is estimated at about $100,000, the greater part of which is covered by insurance.

Know-Nothing Congressional Nominations.

LOUISVILLE, Thursday May 17.

The Know-Nothing Convention, now in session here, has nominated HUMPHREY MARSHALL, late United States Commissioner to China, as their candidate for Representative in Congress from this District.

Ship News.

BOSTON, Thursday, May 17.

At San Juan del Sud, May 5, ship Rose Standish, from New-York, arrived April 15. The ship Huguenot, which sailed from Philadelphia Oct. 16, had not arrived, and was considered a missing vessel. She was owned in Providence.

At San Francisco, April 27, ship Charmer, Lucas, for New-York in fifteen days, with a full cargo of flour and wheat.

LATER FROM HAVANA.

The Political Crisis—Movements of American and Foreign Vessels of War.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

HAVANA, Tuesday, May 8, 1855.

We have no new events to chronicle, growing out of the action of the "Military Commission," although the Queen's Attorney has been busy in hunting for material and preparing suspicious circumstances, for such victims as justice may require. Don PEDRO PABLO DE CRUCES has issued his order, dated the 3d of May, commanding Don JOSE MANUEL FORRAS, Don AUGUSTINE LAFUENTE and the Señora Doña RITA BALLES to commit themselves to the Royal Treon Prison, to purge themselves of the crime of "infidelity," before the "Council of War." Should they not obey the summons, they will be sentenced by the Tribunal, according to the finding of the Fiscal; and appearing—the same result would obtain, with a personal difference. It is to be presumed that they will not voluntarily trust to the tender mercy so fatally exhibited in the cases of PINTO, ESTRADERS and others.

The United States steamer Princeton, HAGER, Commander, has been reported by a Spanish vessel, from off Cape San Antonio.

The sloop-of-war Jamestown, ELLIOTT, Commander, we are advised from MARIANNA, has been seen off that port.

The United States war steamer San Jacinto, STRINGHAM, flag-ship of Commodore MCCALLEY, left this the morning of the 3d inst., and arrived at Key West the afternoon of the same day, as we are advised by the pilot of the steamer Isabel, arrived yesterday; and she was remaining at anchor in that port the night of the 6th, when the Isabel left, all well on board. By the Isabel we learn that the squadron is to rendezvous at that port about the middle of the month—and possibly afterwards, that Commodore MCCALLEY will call at Havana, to hold a consultation of amity with the Captain-General of Cuba—not to extend hollo-fashion, serious of warlike character, and accompanying—with his homeward, consisting of the San Jacinto, Princeton, Susquehanna, Fulton, Jamestown, Cyane, Falmouth, Porpoise, and Saratoga.

GEORGE SERRETT, formerly connected with the Albany Museum, and well known in the city and County as a comic actor of no mean ability, died at his residence there, about 2 o'clock on Tuesday morning. He leaves a wife and large family to mourn his loss. He was a resident of England he was known as Mr. White's residence of GEORGE SERRETT. He was an intimate of DOUGLAS JERROLD.

The Transcript announces the arrival in Boston of the sloops of Indian Street, crossed by the sons WILLIAM and Andrew, for Andrew Jackson. The figure is emphatically a striking one, somewhat larger than the size of life. Mr. Brown has been engaged upon it for several years.

SENATOR BROOKS vs. ARCHBISHOP HUGHES.

The Facts—The Evidence—The Record, and the Law.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

My statements in the Senate of New-York, which the Archbishop has, so many times, and in "so many ways, "branded" as "falsehoods," were as follows:

"I have taken occasion during a visit of a day in New-York to secure references, taken from the Register's office there, of the amount of property held by JOHN HUGHES in that City. I SUPPOSE its value to be in New-York alone, not much short of five millions of dollars. So far from this property being held, when in Churches, by Trustees, there are numerous instances from Trustees to JOHN HUGHES! Beginning with February, 1842, and continuing through 1854, A FRIEND OF MINE COPIED FIFTY-EIGHT ENTRIES OF AS THIRTY DISTINCT PARCELS OF PROPERTY made in the name of and for JOHN HUGHES, all in the space of twelve years!—not to JOHN HUGHES, Bishop, nor to JOHN HUGHES, Archbishop, nor to JOHN HUGHES, as Trustee to the great Roman Catholic Church, but to plain JOHN HUGHES, in his own proprio persona. Some of these pieces of property cover whole squares of land, and nearly all of them are of great value. The rule of that Church is never to part with property, and to receive all that can be purchased. What is true of New-York City is true of the State, and fifteen or twenty pieces of property assigned to Bishop JOHN TIMON, were named by the Senator from Monroe.

"To those who were curious in such matters, Mr. BROOKS exhibited copies of the number, book and page of these several entries in the City of New-York in behalf of JOHN HUGHES."

The Archbishop has never once quoted the first paragraph fully, and he has more than once misquoted it, and with a coolness that has astonished the intelligent readers of our joint correspondence. He has taken pains to omit the words, "I suppose its value to be," etc., "a friend of mine copied," &c., and to change the word "Property" in regard to leases, to the w l de real estate. I carefully and designedly used all these words—"suppose," "a friend of mine," and "Property." The one statement was a belief founded upon information, furnished by a friend, and the other was the use of the word Property in order that there should be no opportunity of using even a technicality against me. The law held a lease for three years to be property, and common sense holds a lease for 999 years, at one cent a year, to be property held on terms equal to a fee simple possession. But even the idea of calling it property at all the Archbishop has said in his letter of April 21, is

In regard to "the number, book and page of the several entries in the City of New-York," I have them before me now, as they were presented by me to the Senate, in March last, and they can be seen by the Archbishop, or by any of his friends, as a part of the notes, from which I then addressed the Senate.

There has been so much equivocation in the Archbishop's letters, thus far, that I design in this letter to place him on record against himself. I mean to prove, in the first place, that, in this country, it is a part of his creed for the Archbishops and Bishops to own and control the temporalities of the Church, including not only the Church proper, but all other ecclesiastical property, acquired by gift, acts of fidelity, legacy, purchase, or otherwise, except when, by writing, it has been confined to some order of Monks or congregation of Priests for their own use.

I mean to show that the Council of Bishops, convened at Baltimore, in 1852, forbid the interference of the Laity in any Church matters, except as they were directed by the Bishops.

I intend to prove that not only the Baltimore Ordinance of 1852, especially sets the State power at naught, if interposed against the authority of this Council of Bishops, but that Archbishop HUGHES himself has issued an official Circular Letter, in direct opposition to the Trust Law of 1784, providing for the incorporation of Religious Societies, and which law, in spirit or in letter, has been upon the Statute Book from that time to the present.

I intend to show that the Archbishop is preparing to evade or avoid the Church Property Law of this State, and to monopolize the entire temporalities of the Church, equally with its spiritualities, in the hand of the one "Archbishop," and the "eight Suffragan Bishops," over whom, with "three upon five hundred Priests, and near one million of Catholics," he assumes authority in what he is pleased to call "the Ecclesiastical Province of New-York."

I mean to show that there has been the widest contradiction of statement by the Archbishop, in his different published letters, in regard to the same facts. Read and judge.

I put his "titles," "investments," "fee simples," "real estate," and boasted pomp and power, side by side with his records of property, and I mean to evaluate that his own nothing but "the bed upon which he sleeps," "a part of his furniture," and "his library."

The alternate denials and admissions of ownership and non-ownership of property on the part of the Archbishop, have puzzled the public not a little, as well as the alternate avowals of poverty and riches. I find an explanation of this double-dealing where I would be glad to know that none existed, in a book on Church Property, as well as other matters, known as the Sacred Rituale Secundum Jesu, where it is explained—in Chapter I, Section 6—"in every Province to let none but the Provincial (or Principal) be fully apprised of the real value of our revenues, and let what is contained in the Repository of Rome be kept as an inviolable secret."

And now let me address myself to you, my amiable antagonist, with a little more directness of purpose.

I have quoted the Revised Statutes to show that leases for a very limited period are property, and that you, the Archbishop, have recorded, as the owner of such leases. You demur, by a quibble, equivocation, or any sort of evasion, get over this fact any more than you can rid of such a "wretched and vile insect" as myself, by the mere volition of casting him, "with covered hands," from your upper window upon the pavement below. Amiable man—your power is not equal to your will, and you will have to address the public, myself, or somebody else, many times, before this Church Property Controversy is closed. I am not boastful, I hope, but in a war thus forced upon me, my motto is that of Old Grip—(father's large "faucet" perhaps)—the Raven of poor Barnaby Rudge, when he cried, "Never say die." The end is approaching, you will have to consider both with closed and covered hands before the end.

"You little thought that day of pain,
When I escaped from out the lightning's flash,
You bade me to destruction dash.
That one day I should come again. * *
But time at last sets all things even;
And if we do but watch the hour,
There never yet was human power
Which could evade, if unforgiven,
The patient search and vigil long
Of him who treasures up a wrong."

Personally, however, I bear no malice towards you, my antagonist; and from first to last I have felt that you were your own worst enemy. I have on more than one occasion had demonstrated the fact that there are men of your own faith in this City, who, while they fear you, dare expose you to me, and through me to the public. And but for unobtrusive, excommunications and persecutions, through life and death—for aught your will is law, you are alike merciless towards the dead and living—many of them would relate their own unvarnished tales before the public, and reveal a state of fact and of despotic power which would shock the moral sense of the whole community.

It was an honest believer in the creed of the Romish Church who went to Albany to tell me of your cruel and unmerciful rule in regard to the dead, in Calvary Cemetery. It was a believer in the same Church who exposed to me the existence of the property at La Fargeville, so long occupied by one bearing your own name and of your own family. I hear, too, of your recented generosities all over the Island and all around it, and I also hear of them far in the interior. You have felt yourself so much a man of power as either to transcend the law or to come short of it, as suited your purposes.

All this I have this morning deemed pertinent as preliminary to my rejoinder to the "ten days or two weeks" labor of yourself, and those "professional gentlemen" whom you have several times announced as employed to aid you in answering the letter of "a wife (about" like myself. We shall see whether you have made good your promise to the Public "to prove Senator Brooks a man of falsehood," and "guilty of malignant, deliberate and repeated falsehoods." I am no lawyer, and therefore heeded the wisdom taught by BLACKSTONE, COKE and MANSFIELD, and the more important advantages of measuring swords with the skillful men of the profession. But though not bred to the Bar, I think I can tell a hawk from a handsaw, and when that a lease conveyed to JOHN HUGHES for 999 years, at one cent a year, is PROPERTY, and that a legal conveyance of sundry parcels of land and other possessions to the same distinguished person, is Property also.

Let me ask you, Sir, if in giving Mortgages on Property, of which you were, or are owner, you did so by order of Court, as required by the Statute, or whether you acted in regard to such property as if it were absolutely your own! If you have not conformed to the order of the Court, and there is no evidence that you have done so, then even in regard to this Property there is damaging evidence that you have used your own name for property which belonged to Trustees. Worse than this, you have conveyed Property to Bishops personally, which stood recorded as belonging to Trustees, and you have also conveyed Property to the Bishops, personally, which you have also declared "belonged to the Catholic PEOPLE OF THE DIOCESE." If those "mitred men," "the laity" of your Church, whom you speak of so contemptuously, in the pulpit and out of it, already to govern the Temporalities of the Church, were to take you in hand, they would make you amenable to the law of the State, if not to that Sovereign of "the States of the Church," to whom you owe your highest allegiance, and whom you so recently visited in all the pomp and pomp of State at His Imperial Palace.

Indeed, I rejoice that you, as my opponent, have invoked the aid of counsel, as a mental refreshment to their statements, with candor, the material portions of my own proof in regard to the conveyance of Property to JOHN HUGHES. The principle embodied in my speech on the Ownership of Property in you, is over and over again admitted, and yet you persist, I see, in the same quibble, equivocation and language as in previous epistles. Why, you refer to "Brooks" no more of whom is on record, as "the owner" in your previous letters, but in fact, your first, last, your total defence of rhetoric about the whole period which you have planned and secured during twenty-two months of very careful labor. Twice and twice and twice invoked to furnish my warrantry, I have delivered and repeat like the following:

"As Napoleon's conscience was his own."
"A Polonius conscience very blind and weak."
"Fortune's corner of mendicity."
"Bold corner of falsehood."
"An expert in every department of falsehood."
"Numerous, deliberate and wicked falsehoods."
"No question of falsehood unemployed, &c., &c., &c.
"We can say of him, but in a different sense, what the poet said of SHERIDAN,—he "ran

Through each mode of the lyre,
And was master of all."

These are the texts of one who uses "the symbol of Christ," and claims to be "the Shepherd of Souls." And not content with assailing me personally, you assail the American Press, mind and people, in style and spirit most offensive to them, and to the country.

Now let me in perfect equanimity of mind review your long labor and see where you stand. I intend to condemn you, not by opinions, but by facts, and out of your own mouth. I shall follow you through all the windings of your unfair and contradictory assertions, and shall begin with the statements signed by Messrs. GLOVER and WETMORE, which, let me hope the reader will, just here, again peruse in full. This statement declares that Nos. 9, 10, 18, and 22, were subsequently reconveyed, and that one lot, though separately numbered on the map, is the same, and that a conveyance, cited by me, has expired. Granted. In what respect does all this impeach my veracity? I had charged you, the Archbishop, with doing this very thing in order to show that you were a General Broker in Real Estate. I had even published conspicuously your sale and conveyance of property, "the property of God," as you called it, "to the Harlem Railroad Company" for $46,000 in January, 1853, and recorded in April of the same year, (lib. 616, p. 649.)

More than this. Unused to the skillful examination of legal papers, I did not even trust myself to investigate the records. A gentleman in good practice at the bar, and of high legal and moral standing in society, performed this service for me, and gave me authority, for what I stated in the Senate, and an exact copy of all the City records I have published concerning property to John Hughes. I knew with whom I was dealing when I thus relied upon truthful and competent gentlemen to search the records.

I now propose to give from gentlemen, and legal gentlemen, too, of undoubted veracity, a thorough endorsement of the spirit and substance of all I said in the Senate, and of all I have written since touching the conveyances of property to JOHN HUGHES. Here are my witnesses:

LETTER FROM MORTIMER DE MOTTE, Esq.

NO. 257 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK, May 14, 1855.

HON. ERASTUS BROOKS—Dear Sir: In reply to your note of this date, I would state that the memorandum of the property held in the name of JOHN HUGHES, stating the book and page of the several entries, as stated by you in the Senate, was the result of my own personal examination of the book in the Register's Office of, and containing the instruments of the grantees of real estate in this City. It was my original design to procure, not only a full list of the conveyances to, but description and value of the property, the title to which was vested in JOHN HUGHES, but my engagements would not permit, and I hence limited my examination of the book and page recording such conveyances. Whatever inaccuracies there were in that memorandum, as to the number of the conveyances, if any, are attributable to me alone, and press for want of time in which to identify the grantee as Rev. JOHN HUGHES, Archbishop of the Roman Catholic Church in New-York.

The result, however, and the memorandum given by me to you was correct, as to the number of conveyances made to the Archbishop, with a striking diminution, and the number of conveyances to him, vesting in him absolutely the title in fee simple, fully establishes the principle asserted by you.

In this connection I would say that I regard the Church Property bill as one of the most important ever passed by our State Legislature. The rapid and constant accumulation of property by the prelates of the Romish Church, to descend and be added to by them in perpetual succession, would, in the first place, carry into operation the principle of entailment wisely forbidden by our National Constitution, and, in the next place, would in time concentrate in them an amount of property and power which would render them formidable adversaries to cope with.

With this communication, in compliance with your further request, I send you the statement of Mr. HARMON C. GIBSON—a young man of character and intelligence, resident in our office, to whom I entrusted the examination of the records from the memorandum prepared by me for the purpose of obtaining a description of the parcels mentioned in said conveyances.

I have the honor to be,
Very respectfully, your ob't serv't,
MORTIMER DE MOTTE, Esq.

LETTER FROM H. C. GIBSON.

MAY 14, 1855.

HON. ERASTUS BROOKS—Dear Sir: In pursuance of your request, through MORTIMER DE MOTTE, Esq., I hereby state and certify that I received a memorandum containing minutes of records of conveyances, and at his request went to the office of the Register in and for the City and County of New-York, and examined the books of conveyances, and took therefrom the descriptions of property which have been published in your paper; and I further state and certify that the extracts taken by me from such records are true copies of the same, to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Your obedient servant, H. C. GIBSON.

Let me now come to analysis:

From the Archbishop's 21st letter, April 21.	From his letter of May 12.
1. "Mr. BARTHOLOMEW O'CONNOR in that case was only the assignee of a Bankrupt Board of Trustees."	He falsified the record, by stating BARTHOLOMEW O'CONNOR "Trustee to Christ Church." Messrs. GLOVER and WETMORE say: "This deed cites a conveyance by the Trustees of Christ Church to BARTHOLOMEW O'CONNOR."
Isn't this a beautiful distinction upon which to hang such a charge as "falsified the record!"
2. See Mr. BROOKS' record of conveyance, April 23, for answer to this charge.	2. He falsely cited the deed from the Trustees of Transfiguration Church, executed in 1851—the falsehood consisted in supposing what appears upon the face of that deed, that it was simply in confirmation of a title previously vested in the Archbishop.
3. This is the property of which I gave the entire history as given by the City, in 1848, and received by the President, JOHN HUGHES, and his Secretary.	3. He intentionally falsified when he declares that the deed of MICHAEL CURRAN conveyed "a square of land."
4. One of these four relates to the Transfiguration Church, which see April 23—another is half a burial lot—the 3d is first of a lease and second of a conveyance, and Nos. 14 and 16 of Records will show that the conveyance of one parcel was June 19, the other April 1, 1845—and that the lots are entered as six in one case, and one-fifth part in another.	4. He wilfully counts the following (four) premises twice.

This is what is called "a wilful falsehood."

So in regard to the vault under the deed from PATTEN, I am assured to-day, from one who knows, that the facts are that there were two conveyances as stated, two parties being owners.

Below, also, is something inexplicable, and which needs explanation from the "Report of Counsel."

"No. III is between the same parties, and for the same premises mentioned in No. VII.

No. VII is the same as No. III, as above stated."

No. 3 is the same as No. 7, and No. 7 is the same as No. 3. There is something wrong here.

And now let us go back a little and leave words for facts, and more statements for recorded truth. It is with no pleasure that I place the Archbishop on record against himself, although I should be warranted in using any language, becoming a Christian and a gentleman, after the assaults he has made upon me. Here are the records:

CLAIM TO CHURCH AND ALL OTHER ECCLESIASTICAL PROPERTY.

LOOK ON THIS PICTURE.	AND ON THIS.
From the 7th Provincial Meeting of the Roman Catholic Council of Bishops, held in Baltimore. Decree of 1849. "The Fathers ordain, that all Churches, and all other Ecclesiastical property, which have been acquired by donations or acts of the faithful, for religious or charitable use, belong to the Bishop of the diocese; unless it shall be made to appear, that it was granted to some religious order of monks, or to some congregation of priests for their use."	"I am the owner of a library which would be of little use to many of those who take an interest in the question of my property, but which to me is very valuable."—Letter of April 23.
Decree of a Similar Council, Held in 1852. "We strictly forbid the intermeddling of laymen (laici) in the administration of these things without the free consent of Bishops (Episcopi). Bishops, when not called to this by the Bishop they usurp the powers to use this property, or in any manner frustrate or defraud the will of the donors, or if they try to wrest from the Bishop's hands, the things committed to his trust and care. EVEN BY MEANS OF THE STATE, we define and declare they fall ipso facto, under the punishment inflicted by the fathers of the Council of Trent (Sess. 22, chapter 11, De Reformatione), on the usurpers of ecclesiastical property."	"I am the owner of a part of the furniture of the house in which I live—but only a part."—Same date.
From Archbishop Hughes' Circular Letter, March 16, 1853. THE CATHOLIC BISHOPS OF NEW-YORK, Albany and Buffalo, ARE NOW OWNERS IN FEE SIMPLE of nearly all religious and charitable PROPERTY existing within their respective Ecclesiastical jurisdictions."	"It appears to be a frequent conclusion in the minds of the framers, that the law (Church Property) will crumble when any portion of its contents is confined in its theory. This is not so certain. Prudence would suggest a cautious and hesitating step in the framing and working of the enactment, lest it should be found to be impracticable."—Letter of April 23, against the Church Property Act.
From the Archbishop's Pastoral Letter. "It has been published as a decision of the Bishops that a majority of Trustees shall be entitled to vote, expend or appropriate the revenues, or any other any property, any portion of the property held in trust, they are supposed by admission (concessi) the consent of persons to before allotted to, without the consent of the Bishop, or against the express prohibition of the Bishop, in every case; and it is further established that given that Trustees of the Churches with the approbation of the Pastor, shall not be at liberty

Nor have I closed my record of conveyances to you, JOHN HUGHES. I shall admit errors whatever they are discovered, and insist upon the record wherever it is found. I am not so ambitious of proving a literal, technical fact, such as, to use one of your illustrations, "two and two make four," as I am to prove the greater truth, that you hold large amounts of property in fee simple, that your deeds are scattered far and wide, that they are of other kinds of property than Church lands and edifices. I wish to show, that you sell this property, the Property of God, that you deal in bonds and mortgages, that you speculate out of living men and in the dead. I wish to show, that while pleading the poorest poverty, and warring upon laymen, even of your own faith, you are rich and fare sumptuously, that you are proud and arrogant, abusive and insulting, to all those who dare speak the truth of you and yours. I wish to show the necessity of passing such a Church Property Law, as the Legislature has enacted, when any prelate of any denomination undertakes to control, not only millions of Church Property, but to prevent his fellow-citizens of the same faith from administering its temporalities. To this end I add now the following additional conveyances, in the course already numbered, and admitting the corrections I have made, while they may take from the number fifty-eight, in one case, they will far exceed that number by the claims and admissions of yourself, as to the ownership "in fee simple" of the respective churches in the diocese.

NUMBER FIFTY-ONE.

Commencing at a point where a line drawn parallel with Seventh-avenue, at a distance of 100 feet northeast therefrom would intersect a line drawn parallel with Thirty-first-street, at a distance of 125 feet 6 inches northeast from said Thirty-first-street, running thence southeast in a line parallel with Thirty-first-street 50 feet; thence northeast on the same right angles with Thirty-first-street, 112 feet, and thence northwest in a straight line to place of beginning.

Now, Sir, it amuses me to see with what cool assurance you persist in asserting that a lease for 999 years is not a lot, or three lots, and not property, when even your counsel, Messrs. GLOVER and WETMORE, admit the fact thus at the start:

REPORT.

No. 1, is a lease for 999 years, at a nominal rent, but with a covenant on the part of the lessee to maintain a Church according to the rites and discipline of the Roman Catholic Church.

You also strike out, No. 13 and No. 14, because they are parts of lots, and No. 12 because it is a strip of land, and Nos. 7, 8, 9, 10 and 12, because they have been conveyed to me, and cited by me on the authority of "professional gentlemen" of skill, ability, and uprightness. Even your "professional gentlemen," Messrs. WETMORE and GLOVER, say:

"We have only to observe that the respective deeds are numbered to correspond with the numbers used by Senator BROOKS, and that those which are cited are correctly cited by him, and are conclusive evidence of reference."

And yet even such flimsy pretences you deduct 14 from the 58 conveyances, and 44 from the 101 lots!

Your claim is:

"The property, then, which, received in my name, is the property of the Roman Catholic Church, and the congregations have the church or worship, and their priests' residences, and in some instances their schools. The number of these lots is seventy-seven, (77,) giving a fraction over five lots each for the Church edifices of these fifteen congregations."

Here you put down fifteen Churches, when you know there are nearly twice that number in the City, besides those in the rest of your diocese, over which you claimed, even so far back as 1852, a fee simple ownership. It is in vain, and other ways, you are endeavoring to convince the public that you now possess but $365,000 worth of property, with two-thirds of this sum mortgaged against you, or $245,000 in all!

Now, Sir, it was only on the 26th of April you wrote after several days' delay and deliberation, the following:

"As representative of the Diocese, I am personally indebted to the amount of thirty thousand dollars. But by way of assets I have in my personal right an amount of property which I suppose, if its value could be realized, could cover the debt."

Let the public put these two declarations of April 21 and of May 15 together, and behold the broad and unqualified contradictions between them.

Declared indebtedness, April 21	$30,000
Declared indebtedness, May 15	245,000
Difference	$215,000
Declared assets, April 21	$30,000
Declared assets, May 15	130,000
Difference	$100,000

Again, while you anathematize me as guilty of falsehood, I perceive you equally wrong Mr. LECOUTEULX, when you charge him with "admitting that he told a falsehood." You know that as late as April 21, in his very last letter to you and the public, and in vindication of "the Trustees of the Church of St. Louis," his language was, "Our letters are before the public, and I leave it to them to decide which of us two has been guilty of falsehood." Equally groundless are your assaults upon Senator PUTNAM, one of the brightest ornaments of the State and of the Senate. Upon the Church Property bill which he introduced and you assail, I do not new dwell, nor upon your harsh and bold attacks upon the American Press and its editors. But let me say with HAMLET: "After your death you were better have a bad epitaph, than their ill report while you live."

Of your first letter, conditionally promising the City a Library, you now say:

"It was written on a spirit of playfulness,!"

Then, you said:

"I place myself solemnly there is NO JEST as to the project of the library!"

What am I to think of a man, and an Archbishop, too, who thus, like a child, promises me a boon, and when I claim the pledge, tells me, like a child again, that he was only in fun.

Again, April 26, where you speak so derisively of "Bankrupt Boards of Catholic Lay Trustees," and of "irresponsible lay trustees," you declare that your "income has been derived from the free and voluntary offerings of the flock committed to your charge." So I supposed, and that under the rule which is called Cathedraticum, each large Church of your diocese paid $100 per annum for your support, and the smaller Churches $50 per annum. But now you tell us your income comes from "the Board of Trustees of St. Patrick's Church," "including Calvary Cemetery." They it is, you now say, "who provide for your decent maintenance." Do you not receive support from more sources than these?

Heaven and earth know! there are abundant means to provide "a decent maintenance," from the princely incomes wrung from the friends of the thousands of poor Germans and Irish, whose bones are yearly buried in Calvary, at the rate of $7 for one grave, eight or nine feet long, two feet and three-quarters wide, and nine feet deep, with five bodies sometimes piled one top of another, and $7 additional exacted as often as the one piece of ground is opened for each body interred, besides $10 paid for a head-stone, which head-stone alone can preserve the one grave from the intrusion of other bodies! For such a piece of earth from $17 to $45 is paid. My calculations, the other day, from Catholics come to inform me, were far above the astounding fact of which they complain to one another, and some of them in the very bitterness of soul. Nor, did I make a daily large allowance for the dead, who are thrown, like dogs into trenches, at $3 a head! The Potters' Fields of Italy, where a pit is opened and closed every day in the year, there being 365 in all, and in which the dead, when stripped, are offensively crowded, like carcasses on a battle field, present a scene hardly less revolting.

But I must close, and in doing so, let me remember, kind and considerate Archbishop, your advice to one whom, two weeks since, you thrust, "with covered hands," into the street. You say:

"But, should he (Mr. BROOKS) ever enter on a controversy again, let him not forget the motto prefixed to this letter, in which the great Dutch philosopher proclaims an important principle, namely: 'Light, the mother of truth, will not permit deception to enjoy a long reign.'"

Now, Sir,—by what authority do you claim to give me, whom you have discarded, branded, and a hundred times pronounced guilty of "falsehood," advice! By what authority also do you speak in such an oracular manner to the American Press and People! Who made you, "†JOHN, Archbishop of New-York, or of the Province of New-York!" Did not your title come from a foreign power,—from the Pope and King of "the States of the Church!" In the United States of America, and in the State of New-York, in which you bear yourself in so lordly a manner, freemen possess no titles, and acknowledge no human masters. We have religious liberty, "without discrimination or preference" of sect, guaranteed to us in the Constitution of the State, and in the Constitution of the United States; but the holding "of any office, or title of any kind whatever, from any King, Prince or Foreign State," without the consent of Congress, is in violation of the Constitution of the United States!

Yours is a title from a foreign power, and under it you receive conveyances, sell property, regulate the temporalities of the Church, become an Ambassador to Rome, summoned there by the Pope, and owe mere allegiance there than here.

I deny that in any enlarged, liberal, national, just sense, you are an American. No Autocrat could be more despotic, and no man clothed with place and power, less Republican.

Sir, you profess to be a worshipper of Truth. Let the God of all truth judge between us, our motive, our records, and our acts. It is not by what GROTIUS says, but by what you and I say and do that we are to be judged by men and by the Judge of men. The Spirit of Truth, it has been well written, is the spirit of meekness, and needs not the service of passion. I have endeavored to speak, and write the truth without prejudice or passion; and for to-day again I leave my cause with the public. Very respectfully,

ERASTUS BROOKS.

JUDGE CONKLING'S OPINION.

Judge Conkling on Search and Seizure, in Reply to Mr. Hill.

CORRESPONDENCE.

ALBANY, Wednesday, May 9, 1854.

HON. ALFRED CONKLING: Dear Sir:—Opinions are now being obtained from distinguished lawyers, to prejudice the public mind, to bias the Courts of Justice, and perhaps secure the repeal of the Prohibitory Liquor Law, enacted in the late session of the New-York Legislature.

To counteract the effect of such opinions; to discourage presumptuous upon its invalidity; and to reassure the friends of Prohibition, that we have a law which they need not hesitate to enforce, and which the Courts will ultimately sustain, we respectfully solicit an expression from yourself upon the points disputed. We beg particularly to invite your attention to the arguments of Mr. HILL, of this city, on the Search and Seizure Clauses.

We have the honor to be, Dear Sir,
Your obedient servants.
[Signed by the Executive Committee.]

JUDGE CONKLING'S REPLY.

MELROSE, near Auburn, May 12, 1855.

GENTLEMEN: I am sorry that I cannot more suitably comply with the request contained in your letter of the 9th inst., to make known to you my opinion of the constitutionality of those parts of the "Act for the prevention of Intemperance, Pauperism and Crime," lately enacted by the Legislature of this State, that have been drawn into question, and especially of the validity of Mr. HILL's objections thereto. I take no exception to your expectation that I will do this, if at all, gratuitously, because I recognize the obligation resting on every member of society to endeavor to promote its welfare.

But circumstances, with a detail of which it is unnecessary to trouble you, prevent me from attempting more than to state very summarily the impressions I entertain on the subject after a careful perusal of Mr. HILL's elaborate and able arguments, but without any examination of the numerous authorities he has seen fit to cite. The principles laid down in those authorities ought to be familiar to every lawyer; though some of them, doubtless, may, nevertheless, shed light upon the applicability of those principles to the questions to which you have invited my attention.

The denunciations of this act as unconstitutional, by those with whose particular pursuits or habits it comes in conflict, are in terms so sweeping and indiscriminate, that it may be useful, at the outset, briefly to define the actual limits of the debatable ground, if any, covered by it. No sound lawyer will deny that a State Legislature has authority to pass laws for the purpose indicated by the title of this act, and to this end, not only to prohibit domestic traffic in intoxicating liquors, but also to subject them to forfeiture and destruction as nuisances to the public health and morals. To protect society from the aggressions of its evil-disposed or heedless members, is the main design of civil government; and for a community to renounce this power, by withholding it from its legislative representatives, would be suicidal.

If the right by law to ordain and direct the destruction of alcoholic liquors appears questionable at first blush, it is only because of the novelty of its exercise. In regard to other property, a like power has long since been exercised in this State, as it probably has been in every State in the Union, and indeed by every civilized nation in the world without scruple or objection. The authority conferred on the Health Officer of the City of New-York, for the purpose of preventing infection or contagion, to destroy bedding or clothing, or any part of a cargo found on board a vessel subject to quarantine, and "that he may deem infected;" the power given to civic corporations to seize and confiscate gunpowder kept in improper places; the duty enjoined on sheriffs, constables and police officers, to destroy E. O. and Fare tables, and other apparatus for gambling; and the right conferred by law on all persons to kill dogs that worry sheep, are familiar examples of the exercise by the Legislature of this State of the conservative power in question.

But it is by the National Legislature, that in this country, the power to seize and confiscate private property for infractions of municipal laws, and as a means of compelling obedience thereto, has been most extensively and unmercifully exercised. I refer especially to the slave fugitive act of Congress, by which, the importation of foreign goods, which have been paid duties, becomes of the same liability to be seized by the National Government. It has unfortunately, from the policy of the United States to rely for revenue mainly on duties levied on imported merchandise, become their payment certain prescribed forms are required to be observed by the importer, and if he omits them, whether wilfully or negligently, his goods, and in some instances the vessel or other vehicle in which they are brought into the country, are subjected to forfeiture, whereby the owner is so effectually deprived of his property as if it had been destroyed. With respect to the act under consideration, there are those it is true, who profess to believe that in the present instance it was inexpedient to resort to this power.

This, however, was a question addressed to the discretion of the Legislature, and even conceding that the large majorities by which the act was passed, erred in judgment in this respect, it is none the less valid and obligatory on this account. But it is moreover strenuously insisted that the forms of procedure, prescribed by it to accomplish the destruction of obnoxious liquors, are in conflict with one of the provisions of the bill of rights incorporated in our State Constitution, declaring that "no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law." This fundamental principle of civil liberty is asserted in the English Magna Charta, and was designed to shield the subjects against arbitrary and tyrannical acts on the part of the crown.

It forms a part of one of the amendments to the Constitution of the United States, and has been incorporated into many if not all of the Constitutions of the States composing our Union. The great importance attached to it by writers on the English Constitution, and the cogent propriety of its observance in this country, have naturally led to this repeated assertion of it as one of the fundamental principles of free government, although, probably, little apprehension has actually been felt of its violation, and no very clear notions entertained of its supposed necessity or practical operation under our political system.

Its incorporation in our organic laws can hardly be supposed to have been designed primarily as a restraint on the legislative power, though, doubtless, a legislative act directing or authorizing acts clearly forbidden by it would be void. But whatever else may have been the design of its formal assertion, it is very certain that it was not intended to impair or obstruct the great right of self-preservation inherent in every organized community, or to encourage fanciful objections, however plausible, to such restraints upon individual action as may be requisite for this purpose.

The question in this case is whether there is anything unwarrantable in the exercise by the people of the State of New-York, acting through their constitutional representatives, in the instance now under consideration. Mr. HILL's objections relate chiefly to the proceedings prescribed to ascertain whether the liquors complained of are really such as are liable to forfeiture. Unquestionably these proceedings ought to look with scrupulous care, not less to the security of the owner against injustice than to the public against infractions of the law.

It is alleged that the safeguards provided against private oppression are insufficient. But the power of remedial legislation includes the power of adapting it to the nature of the evil to be suppressed, and the circumstances and exigencies of the case. In the present case, it did not and could not escape the attention of the Legislature, that unless the provisions of the act were of no stringent a character as to shut out the prospect of impunity, multitudes of fraudulent and cunning schemes would be devised, and often successfully put in practice to evade the law, or elude its penalties. Against such a consequence it was right, proper and necessary for the Legislature studiously to guard. There was abundant reason also to apprehend that for some time, at least, after the passage of the act, there would be frequent violations of it, and consequently numerous prosecutions under it. For the purpose of mitigating so great an evil it was eminently fit to require prosecutions for forfeiture, to be commenced in the most direct and simple manner, compatible with the necessary regard to justice, and for this and other reasons, that reasonable presumption until repelled, should take the place, to an extent somewhat greater than is usual in ordinary legal proceedings, of direct proof.

Undoubtedly these principles were to be applied, not recklessly or vindictively, but cautiously in perfect good faith; and so I think they were intended to be applied, notwithstanding the unseemly vituperation the act has called forth. I see in it, from beginning to end, it is true, evidence of an anxious desire to accomplish the end in view; but I think I see in it, also, indications equally unequivocal, of a desire no less earnest, to avoid unnecessary rigor. Are the proceedings prescribed for the condemnation of liquor, such as are implied by the term "due process of law" as used in the Constitution? Conceding that Mr. HILL is right throughout in his interpretation of this inhibition, it does not, I think, by any means follow that he has succeeded in showing the provisions of the act to be in conflict with it. I know nothing at all of the history of the preparation of the "bill," as he rather oddly insists on still denominating it, notwithstanding it has passed through all the forms of legislation, and has thus become entitled, even if wholly invested, at least to the application of an act.

But, with one exception, every one of his features supposed to be at variance with the Constitution, has its counterpart or rudimentary form in the forms of proceeding for the forfeiture of unlawfully imported goods prescribed by the collection act of 2nd March, 1799, as they have always been and still are administered by the national Courts; inasmuch that it is difficult to resist the conclusion that the act of Congress, and the practice under it, served as a model and guide in framing the act in question. The chief difference in this respect between the act of Congress and the New-York act, is that, by the latter, the rights of property are more carefully guarded than by the former, so that a pipe of brandy from France, or a case of gin from Canada, imported without the observance of the prescribed forms, whereby, at most, a trifling loss of revenue would be occasioned, would be subject to confiscation in the "process of law" in the national Courts, more stringent than it would be, had it been lawfully introduced and then applied to the mischievous purposes forbidden by the act in question in the Courts of the State.

In the former case no oath would be required to authorize its seizure, which might be made by any officer of the Customs on reasonable suspicion arising from circumstances within his own knowledge, or communicated to him orally by an informer, whose name need not be disclosed until after condemnation and sale, and then only for the purpose of claiming his share of the proceeds. The seizure in such case may be made at any time and in any place. The owner, whether known or not, is entitled to no particular attention, the notice of fourteen days being addressed generally to all persons. If no claimant appears, condemnation follows of course, without any other evidence of guilt, except the presumption arising from such non-appearance. Should any one appear as claimant, he is required to "verify his claim on solemn oath or affirmation," and give security for costs, before he can be admitted to contest the alleged forfeiture. His plea or answer is usually a simple denial of the truth of the accusation; and with regard to the proof on the trial, it is by the act of 1799, already mentioned, expressly ordained "that if the property be cla

NEW-YORK CITY.

Public Association.

A West Green Old Public Association.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, May 14, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

DEAR SIR: In one of the local "items" of the Times, published this morning, it is stated "that this week is a week of the Public Association is to be held in this city, preparatory to action Reform committee and commissioners."

Will you permit me, Sir, to correct this misstatement, by informing the "Public Association" will be held this week or any future period to suppose the committee and commissioners of any sort. RAKER and his associates are in the minority of the law—a power, in the judgment of the Public Association, sufficiently competent to convict and punish the guilty, while at the same time it leaves the honest unmolested, protection even the innocent. To this have the "Public Association" and all other honest citizens look for justice. We ask for nothing more, but we do demand that.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

With profound respect, yours, &c.,

JAMES M. TURNER,

President Public Association.

DANNY'S OWN ACCOUNT OF HIS ARREST.

While I was standing at the wheel of the Isabella Hunt, a dirtier lark hailed me and said they wanted to board me. Thinking, probably, that it was a pilot-ship, I put the course of the steamer adrift, and received. The officers boarded me and ordered me to the Tombs, and the rest I have to tell the lark was sufficiently sure enough for one to see everything aboard of her. We were then within one and a half miles of Fulton, or more or eight, as the officers say. The lark met a large boat to us, manned by about ten men, as I supposed. On coming alongside, they all jumped upon deck and moved towards me. I had no idea of their being officers, but thought I remembered seeing one of the same before. The person, whom I afterwards found out to be Officer EVANS, came towards me and said, "We want you—come here." The minute I heard the voice I was struck thunderstruck, not having the remembrance of a voice ever having been near me after me. I was astonished and bewildered. I could not for the life of me make out what it all meant. The party seemed to know me very well, while I was quite in the dark, until Officer BARNUM approached me, and, offering me his hand, said, "How are you, Lou?" Quick as lightning I comprehended all, and involuntarily made an involuntary movement towards the cabin. I was quickly caught by the legs, arms, head and body, as if I was some hyena that could eat the whole party up at a mouthful. Their strength was not of prevailing to arrest me made me quite irritable, and, trying to free myself, I asked them what it all meant, demanded them to make some explanation of their actions, and called upon the crew to witness the manner of my treatment. At this moment one of the party, whom I never found out to be a hand on board the Steamboat, rushed towards me with a pistol in his hand, and emphatically ordered them shoot him. He gave one side my cocked—"don't let me give him any?" I said him to shoot just as quick as he liked, and called him "coward" to attack a man who was completely unarmed. I had no weapon of any description whatever when my prisoner. I was clothed in my shirt sleeves, and I did say whatever they were sure to have seen them. The officers then in a terrible state of excitement, and called upon the party who carried the pistol, and then found out the hand, which I now learned was the Steamboat. I was mortified and intensed very much at the unmanly manner in which my arrest was conducted. The officers came well prepared to take me in all respects. Each of them was armed with a board-ing pike, cutlass, dirk knife, and, being a rough looking set of rascals, they put all the appearance of being equipped with some kind of mischief enough, but the next morning I felt quite resigned, and looked upon the matter with as light a heart as I could.

During the passage some scenes took place that were decidedly rich, and were to me very amusing. The officers seemed to be fearful of my either throwing them over board, or, at least, of my attempting to do so. I paid no attention to all such fears, and let them think between me and any of them as I found the right place to speak to me. On the occasion I said in a jesting manner that I would like to get into the magazine for a few minutes, as I would blow them all to pieces without any hesitation, when it was received by them in the right way, and to prevent the explosive matter, I was then locked up in the cabin, and kept in each place that I could be accessible for me to find it, although they might have learned very well from the place in which I made the remark, that I meant it in a joke, and quite merely so. The entire proceedings were conducted by the officers as those, which appeared to me ridiculously funny that they were ever practiced. Perhaps, I would be quite safe there, well convinced in these parts; and besides, I have the satisfaction of being quite unwilling to do any thing, however, I am glad now that I did not be the Company Islands, as I am quite uneasy of my life in New-York, which, in my opinion, is equivalent to an acquittal, as I am clearly of POGES was done in self-defence.

Yesterday Evans in his examination, as he said, Danny was in the habit of the following Bowery Hall, it mentioned the Poges's death in detail in their presence to the effect that I should be charged of murder, from I should be taken, which would have been highly dangerous, as I was severely wounded, and should have been anything but desirable. Barnum, and Officer Turner and Barnum, I understand, called upon the charge instead of murder, for the charge instead of murder, for I was not guilty, and that the Poges's friends were more freely engaged in bring them than he or any of his party were in the evening.

Board of Education.

A regular meeting of the Board of Education was held on Wednesday, at 3 P. M., at the Hall of the Board, Wm. H. Neilson, Esq., President, in the Chair.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Sundry communications were received from the School Officers of various Wards, asking confirmation of appointments of Commissioners, Trustees, and Inspectors to fill vacancies caused by resignation and removal. Referred to Committee on Elections and Qualifications. Communications were received soliciting appointments for assistants and repairs of School buildings as follows: In the Seventh Ward an appropriation of $12,410, for the purpose of putting an additional story and extending the roof of School No. 2 in Henry-street; in the Twelfth Ward, $440 for to furnish stoves in the School House No. 43; in the Thirteenth Ward, $1,246 10, for same work. Referred to Finance Committee. In Eleventh Ward, $1,000 was also required from the Commissioners of the Alms-house, including of the passage of a resolution by that Board, that no person appointed as teacher of the School on Randall's Island after the 20th May, inst., will be furnished with apartments for residence on the Island. Referred to a Select Committee.

PUBLIC EXHIBITION OF THE WARD SCHOOLS.

The School officers of the Eighteenth Ward submitted a communication recommending a public exhibition and promotion of all the scholars in the Public Schools of the City, to be given in June next. It is suggested in the communication that such a public display will show effectually what is being done for general education in New-York. Most favorable results, it is urged, would come from the adoption of the suggestion.

On motion, the communication was referred to the Committee on Course of Studies, to report at the next meeting.

INCREASE OF SALARIES OF TEACHERS.

The Clerk of the Board, in compliance with a resolution passed at the last meeting of the Board, submitted a statement of the increase in the salaries of teachers since the last day of January last to the 1st of May inst., in each ward, with the aggregate amount of such increases.

[illegible] above the aggregate payments for salaries of teachers in the month of January to have been [illegible] 66. The average monthly increase since to the [illegible] is given as $8,180 03, equal to $36,045 24 a year. The total decrease is given as $163 93, the decrease in the Seventh, Tenth, Nineteenth and Twenty-First Wards.

[illegible] to suspend the reading of the report and to be printed, led to a somewhat animated discussion.

Mr. HUTTON wanted to know where the [illegible] of pay went to before he could vote to [illegible] The Board, through the report, might become [illegible] of fear that were to have immediate consideration. [illegible] in his view, was running to bankruptcy. The most special merchant imaginable [illegible] such a loose system of incurring obligations. The Board was proceeding. He moved, as an amendment to the motion of the entire document, and [illegible] have it printed.

Mr. FAILLAYE urged the reading of the report, [illegible] that if ordered to be printed without [illegible] in the Board, the members of the Board [illegible] to pretend ignorance of its contents. [illegible] all documents, he insisted, deserved to be [illegible] were consigned to an arcana of oblivion—[illegible] they were seldom received.

[illegible] in favor of the report prevailed.

[illegible] to the reading of the report, Commissioner [illegible] inquired where the $28,000 and upwards [illegible] as the total increase of salaries for the year was [illegible] Board certainly had not a single dollar [illegible] appropriated for that purpose, unless additional [illegible] were granted by this Common Council.

Mr. [illegible] Wood said the most economical [illegible] could not be adopted in the management of the [illegible] and that both City and Commissioners in a body [illegible] to give guarantee at least of payment of decent salaries to their teachers.

Connected with this subject of salaries of teachers, the Finance Committee submitted resolutions recommending the appropriation of $22,000 to $25,000 for the payment of the salaries of teachers and janitors in the Ward Schools, for the months of April and May respectively, the same being paid by the City Chamberlain.

ANOTHER MATTER OF EXPENSE.

A resolution was submitted by the Finance Committee and adopted, directing the City Comptroller to have placed in the City Treasury $60,000, subject to the drafts of the Board on and after the 21st August.

TWO NEW SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

The Finance Committee submitted resolutions approving of the contracts for the erection of two new school buildings, one in Fourth-street, near University-place, another in Fifth-street, near Lexington-avenue. Resolutions adopted.

VAGRANT CHILDREN IN THE UPPER PART OF THE CITY.

Mr. John H. Reese read in quite a lengthy communication, stating that he was engaged in gathering neglected and vagrant children from the streets in the Twentieth and Twenty-first Wards for education and salutary efforts in their behalf. He proposed to establish an industrial school, and solicits aid of the Board in furnishing the school rooms with desks, benches, and other appurtenances. Laid on the table.

After some unimportant miscellaneous business the Board adjourned.

Meeting of the Committee on Railroads.

The Committee on Railroads of the Board of Aldermen met last evening in the Chamber of the Board. Present—Alderman MERRS, Chairman; Aldermen VOORHIS and DRAKE.

There was quite a large number of persons present.

The principal question before the Committee was the petition of the Harlem Railroad Company to have the resolution, passed Dec. 27, 1854, prohibiting the use of steam below Forty-second street, eighteen months from that date, repealed. A remonstrance of the citizens and property-holders against the repeal was also before the Committee.

No one appeared on behalf of the Company.

Mr. BENJAMIN WHITLOCK was the first speaker. He spoke at some length, and characterized the tunnel from Thirty-second to Fourth-street as a great nuisance, and very annoying to the people; and that the chimneys, or, as the Company term them, "Ventilators," disfigured the street. Also, that several persons had been killed and injured by this tunnel.

He asked "Why the Harlem Railroad Company should be ceded the whole of Fourth-avenue, when they had stated facts which they could not substantiate, and which even Mayor WOOD himself had shown not to be true!

Ex-Alderman MOTT of the Twenty-first Ward, said that he did not appear as counsel, but only as an owner of property in the neighborhood, which was demaged by the railroad. He went on to say that every railroad was a nuisance where they used steam-power—that if buildings could not be erected on a street where steam was used, then the Railroad Company must give away and become subservient to the growth and prosperity of the City. That the Second, Third, Sixth and Eighth avenues were rapidly being built up above Forty-second-street, while Fourth avenue remained just as it was. He contended, also, that according to the terms of the Ordinance the Company had to bright up until the tunnel. That the memorial of the Company was written either by a person entirely unacquainted with the rights of the parties, or one who intended to wilfully deceive—and that they had not carried out their contract in good faith.

The New Steamer Arago.

The Arago, a new steamer for the Havre line, made her trial trip on Wednesday and Thursday, and returned Thursday morn.

The engines of the Arago are two of sixty-five inches diameter of cylinder and six feet stroke; the performance of engines and boilers was very satisfactory, and gave promise of a good degree of speed and great permanence in the machinery.

The interesting feature of the trial was the introduction of the "drag-link" to connect the two engines in the place of the centre shaft, which has so often failed in double engines and occasioned excessive repairs. The drag-link connection has been long used with entire success in other forms of engine, and in connection with the oscillating engines seems to complete the great simplicity and directness of action of that form of engine.

The Arago is 300 feet long, 40½ feet beam, 31½ feet depth of hold, and has accommodation for 950 passengers.

The ship was built by WESTERVELT & Sons, joiner work by GUTTER & YOUNG, and engines from the Novelty Works of STILLMAN, ALLEN & Co. MORTIMER LIVINGSTON, Esq., is the Agent.

Alleged Case of Seduction.

DANIEL MAGEE, a rather respectable looking mechanic, was yesterday arrested by Captain STEVENSON, of the Sixteenth Ward, on the complaint of seducing Miss ELLEN MILLS, of No. 101 Thirty-fourth-street, on or about the 1st of November last, under the promise of marriage. The complainant is a woman of at least twenty, and rather prepossessing. ELLEN says she became acquainted with the man DANIEL in the month of July, 1854, from which time he commenced to pay his addresses to her. From July to November he was a warm and constant visitor, but soon after effecting his purpose under the promise of marriage, he forsook her company and neglected to fulfil his vows. He was held to answer by the magistrate.

Supposed Murder of an Infant.

MARGARET HOGAN, a resident of New-Jersey, was yesterday taken into custody and committed to the Tombs on the charge of having murdered her infant. The accused resided in the back part of Jersey City, near the nearby ground. The alleged father of the child is supposed to be a Frenchman. The complainant in this case, MARY ARTHUR, had observed her going into the woods with the child, and followed her; but going in the marsh she was unable to keep close to her on account of the tide setting in. She, however, watched the accused coming home, and asked her where the child was; she replied it was asleep in her arms. When MARGARET got home they asked her where the child was, she not having any child; she answered them by saying that she had given it to the father. The affair will be fully investigated by Justice CONNOLLY.

Scalded to Death.

Coroner HILTON held an inquest on the body of a child, about 4 years of age, named ELIZABETH BELLIS, at No. 8 Batavia-street, that came to its death from scalds. The accident occurred on Tuesday morning last, while the mother was lifting the teapot from the stove. The child was sitting opposite to the fire, and the mother had filled the teapot in order to give the family their breakfast. She had, it appears, just taken hold of the handle, and was lifting it up, when the teapot fell on the stove, throwing the hot tea and steam on the lower part of the body and right leg, scalding the child. The little girl lingered in great agony till yesterday morning, when death relieved her from her sufferings. It is supposed the heat of the stove had been so intense that it melted the solder of the teapot.

The Knife-Stabbing Cases.

PETER MULLANY, residing at No. 216 East Eleventh-street, was taken into custody yesterday, charged with stabbing JOHN MCGEE with a dirk knife in the side. The wound, which was inflicted while the two were in a coach, is considered highly dangerous. Justice WOOD committed the accused for examination.

CHARLES FRANCIS, a Swede, was yesterday captured by officer FULLERMAN, while attempting to escape after having inflicted a serious wound with a knife on his wife. The accused, who is a sailor, resides in the house corner of Dover and Water streets. He and his wife had some family difficulty, and in a passion he deliberately walked up to her and plunged the knife into her side, inflicting a serious wound. Justice CONNOLLY committed both the accused and witness to the Tombs to wait instructions from the Coroner.

Meeting of the Bricklayers Benevolent Protective Union.

A general meeting of this Association, which now comprises upwards of 200 members, was called on Thursday evening at the Union Shades, corner of Great Jones-street in the Bowery. The object of the meeting was the adoption of a report drawn up by the Committee in reference to the possibility of an advance in the general rate of wages. It would appear that up to the commencement of the present year a journeyman's wages have been uniformly two dollars a day, and in spite of the permanent high prices of provisions since that period, a reduction to fourteen shillings has been imposed, which is now the subject of complaint and remonstrance.

It was agreed respectfully to address the master builders of New-York, with a view to demonstrate to them the necessity of a return to the old rate of wages. This being the principal business of the evening, on its conclusion the Association adjourned.

Cricket at Newark, N. J.

The Newark Cricket Club commences their season on Monday next, on their new ground, Railroad-avenue, a little south of the Chestnut-street Depot. Twenty-two of the members will play a match. During the Winter recess this Club has had several additional members, and promises a splendid season.

☞ Fanny Fern is writing a story for the New-York Ledger, for which it is said the publisher has to pay her one hundred dollars a column! She has the privilege of making, and is requested to make—as the publisher says—the story as long as possible, and it may be matter of doubt if she will ever stop. A hundred dollars a column is a strong inducement to amplification.

Fires.

The frame building No. 248 Second-avenue, occupied as a baker's shop, was damaged by fire to the amount of $100 at 9 o'clock on Wednesday night. The alarm was made on Washington-street. The origin of the fire was unknown, it was the premises No. 176 Greenwich-street. A quantity of combustible materials occasioned with considerable was found on fire in the second story by a clerk. The fire did not make much headway, and was soon extinguished.

MARGARET O'HEA.... THURSDAY.

SUNDAY ARRESTS.

The number of liquor shops reported by the Captains of Police as having been open for the sale of intoxicating drinks on Sunday last was 561.

CARELESS WORKMEN IN BREAKING-STREET.

Persons passing No. 128 Nassau-street are informed that a beam of bricks were allowed by careless workmen to fall from a considerable height in dangerous proximity with the heads of persons in that narrow and busy street. The complainant from the patients may not be solitary, and that it will be well to keep a sharp look-out in premonitory that locality.

SERIOUS PROSPECT.

M. J. GRENNELEY, of No. 70 Mott-street, disconsolately mourns the absence of his wife, CLARA AVERY, who "left his home at 8 o'clock on Monday morning, and he has not since been able to find her."

ORGANIZED RAPIDS REVIVED.

Complaint is made by many citizens that a numerous section of this fraternity has the street recently infested the neighborhood of James-street and Madison. Especially are their efforts directed to the annoyance of the congregation of James-street Church, the public school, and the residents of that locality. The case was referred to the Captain of the Fourth Ward.

MORE ABOUT THE DOG NUISANCE.

We are desired to notice a communication from Mr. F. O. ROGERS, addressed to the Mayor, calling his Honor's attention to the increasing and dangerous nuisance of the dogs found in the City, and chiefly those exposed for sale in the busy part of Wall-street, with the result of a boy on Sunday, playing upon them all day. Mr. ROGERS tells how a dog sprung on him in passing up Water-street, tearing his clothes, but fortunately inflicting no wound. Before a policeman could be found both dog and its owner had vanished. He adds: "Ever since the sight of a dog makes me shudder at the thought of the probable dreadful death I so narrowly escaped."

Alleged Grand Larceny.

A man named JOHN PORTER was arrested yesterday, charged with stealing a draft for £35 from JOHN NEAL, of Chicago. PORTER, on their way down in the cars, had ingratiated himself into the confidence of the complainant, and at last asked him where he was going, and what amount of money he had. NEAL replied that he had this check or draft for £35, and intended to go home. PORTER laughed at him and called him a fool, stating that a trifle such as that would not treat his friends all around when he got there. Why would he not go to Australia, there was the spot to make money, by expatiating at some length on the pleasures of digging for gold, and the drudgery, perhaps, of being compelled to dig potatoes or carry the hod when he reached the land of his birth, he persuaded NEAL to join him in a voyage to Australia. Arrived at New-York, they put up at a boarding-house, and he lost his money. NEAL gave the draft to PORTER to look at, and by some manœuvre or another it disappeared, and he accused his associate of the theft. The papers have been sent down to the Grand Jury. The journey to Australia is likely to be postponed.

COMMON COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Board of Councilmen.....WEDNESDAY, May 13.

RESOLUTIONS.

By Councilman HASWELL—Whereas, The monthly record of the Prison Association of this City for the month of April last, formally and publicly reports the arrangements of a majority of the City Prisons to be of a character inconsistent with the requirements thereof, and also opposed to the health of its inmates; therefore,

Resolved, That it be referred to ——— to visit and examine the condition and capacities of the City Prisons, and report their opinions thereon, at as early a date as may be practicable.

Resolved, That the Commissioner of Repairs and Supplies have the names of the different streets painted upon the gas-lamps at the corners. Referred.

By Councilman SELLY—Preamble stating that through the praiseworthy and efficient services of officers Joseph Lennox, S. R. Thorne, Lorenzo D. Place, Thomas Barron, Henry Evans, George Green, Edward E. Brush, and Michael Maloney, Louis Baker, the alleged murderer of William Poole, had been arrested; with resolution that the Comptroller pay the rewards offered in favor of said officers for $500 each. Laid on the table.

By Councilman SCHENCK—That the pier foot of Waits-street, North River, be extended. To Committee on Wharves, &c.

By Councilman BARNEY—In favor of paying to foreman of Engine Company No. 16, $261 52, funeral expenses of Antonio Cervecchio, who lost his life while discharging his duties as a fireman. Referred.

By Councilman BEAN—Preamble, with resolution, that the object of the grant to Jacob Sharp and others to lay a railroad in Broadway, be referred to a Special Committee of Five, to report to this Board what action, if any, is necessary in relation thereto. Laid over.

By Councilman MAHONEY—Whereas, Gen. Anthony Lamb, a highly esteemed fellow-citizen, who has held and honorably discharged the duties of various official positions, has been stricken down by death, therefore,

Resolved, That this Board attend his funeral, at No. 8 Albion-place, Fourth-street, on Thursday, the 17th inst., at 4½ o'clock P. M.

COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

The Board went into Committee of the Whole, Councilman PINCKNEY in the Chair, and took up for consideration various papers which had been previously referred to it.

The report of the Committee on Police in relation to augmenting the Police force of the City, being the special order was taken up. The report of the Committee, concurring with the action of the Board of Aldermen. It was read, recommending the additional Policemen as follows: First Ward, five; Fourth, five; Eleventh, seven; Twelfth, ten; Fourteenth, four; Sixteenth, two.

The resolution to adopt the report was lost, and it was resolved that when the Committee rise they report in favor of laying on the table.

The Report of the Committee on Salaries and Offices on the increase of the salary of the Commissioner of Streets and Lamps from $1,500 to $2,500 a year, to commence from the 1st of January last, passed the Committee of the Whole. The Board then adjourned to Friday.

Decisions in Admiralty.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

Before Judge Ingersoll.

TOWAGE—CONTRACT.

Daniel Shea et al. vs. The Sloop Watchman.—This was a libel filed by the owners of the steamboat Pope Catlin to recover the sum of $100, which they alleged the captain of the sloop had agreed to pay them for a towage service. The owners of the sloop denied the agreement, and set up that they had always been ready and willing to pay the usual rate of towage, namely, $10 per hour. Decree for the libelants for the sum of $33 75.

For libelants, Mr. Bogardus; for claimants, Mr. Ketcham.

Daniel Shea et al. vs. The Schooner Pilgrim.—This was a case similar to the above, and the same decree was ordered to be entered.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice Roosevelt.

Abijah Fisher, Thomas Dewey et al. vs. The New-York and New-Haven Railroad Company.—On the 6th of April instant, an order was made ex parte on the application of the defendant, removing this action to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New-York, on a petition, under the first section of the Judiciary act of 1789, showing that the plaintiffs are citizens of the State of New-York, and that the defendant is a corporation, created by and existing under a law of the State of Connecticut, and that the matter in dispute exceeds the sum or value of $500, exclusive of costs.

The plaintiffs now move to vacate the order of the 6th of April, on the ground that it was granted without any notice to the plaintiffs of an application for it.

Also in an affidavit, setting forth the act of the Legislature of this State, passed May 11, 1846, and also stating that such act was accepted by the defendant; that the defendant, on being organized as a company, elected a President residing in this City, established and kept a transfer office here; that the principal part of the whole business of the Company has been done here, and that a majority of the officers, Directors and stockholders have at all times been citizens of the State of New-York, and residing therein.

Mr. H. E. Davies for plaintiffs; Mr. W. C. Noyes for defendant.

ROOSEVELT, Justice.—As a general rule, a party who has appeared in an action in the Courts of this State is entitled by the rule regulating the practice in them to notice of all motions that may be subsequently made in the action. To this rule there are many exceptions. Many orders are obtained ex parte, such as extensions for time to answer, reply, &c. The act of Congress under which the order in question was made does not require notice of presenting the petition for a removal of the cause to be given. It declares that if the defendant shall, at the time of entering his appearance in such State Court, file a petition for the removal of the cause for trial into the next Circuit Court, to be held in the district where the suit is pending, and offer sufficient security for his entering in such Court, on the first day of its session, copies of the process against him, and also for his there appearing and entering special bail in the cause, if special bail was originally requisite therein, the State Court shall accept the surety, and proceed no further in the case.

There was a strict literal compliance by the defendant, with the provisions of this act, in the proceedings taken by it, to obtain the order of the 6th of April.

It would be more orderly to give notice of the presenting of such a petition, and perhaps discreet to require it in all cases.

The notice on which the pending motion was made, does not specify this irregularity, nor intimate any intention to move to vacate the order of the 6th of April, on account of it. Rule 25 is express that "when the motion is to be founded on affidavits, the notice must specify the grounds of the motion." These are having been done, they in my opinion, decline deciding the motion on its merits.

The defendant was incorporated by an act of the Legislature of the State of Connecticut, passed on the 1st Wednesday of May, 1844. By its terms it was authorized to construct a Rail way from Hartford to the west end of the State of Connecticut, and to transport and carry upon it persons and property. Leaving out of view the effect of an act subsequently passed by the State of New-York, it is a Corporation created by and existing under the laws of the State of Connecticut.

By the act of its incorporation its business was to be done within the State of that State. By the business I mean the transportation of persons and property, such a Corporation is a citizen of the State of Connecticut within the meaning of the Jurisdiction of the act of Congress referred to. If sued in the Courts of the State where its principal office of the Board is to be found, its right to applying in time, and in a proper manner, to have the action removed into the Circuit Court of the United States, provided the matter in dispute, by over $500 in amount.

The fact that some, or many of its Stockholders are citizens of this State would not affect such right. That was expressly decided by the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of the Louisville Railroad Company vs. Letson. 2 How. U. S. S. C. R. 497, 8.

That Court said "But there is a broader ground upon which we desire to be understood, upon which we adjudge that our jurisdiction, although it might be maintained, upon the narrow ground already suggested. It is that a corporation created by and doing business in a particular State, is to be deemed to all intents and purposes as a person, although an artificial person, or inhabitant of the same State, for the purposes of its incorporation, capable of being treated as a citizen of that State, as much as a natural person." Marshall vs. Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company. 16 How. 314.

Unless the decisions, by subsequent legislative acts, has ceased to be a corporation created by the State of Connecticut, it would seem to be clear that it has the right to have this action tried in a Court of the United States.

The act of the Legislature of the State of New-York passed May 11, 1846, authorized the defendant to continue and extend their Railroad within this State to the New-York and Harlem Railroad Company's line of road, and convey persons and property on the same.

That act describes the defendant as a corporation, "chartered by the Legislature of the State of Connecticut."

It confers upon the defendant power to acquire title to the necessary real estate, by agreement with the owners of it, or by condemnation in chancery, on making the compensation mentioned. The 5th section enacts "and company shall be liable to be sued by summons, in the same manner, as corporations created by the laws of this State," &c.

The 6th section, and the acceptance of the act by the company, may preclude the company from objecting that any judgment recovered against it, in the Courts of this State, in an action commenced by summons, is not as conclusive upon it in every respect as a judgment recovered in a similar cause of action against a corporation of this State would be against the latter.

But this provision is not more comprehensive than section 427 of the Code. That declares that an action against a corporation created by or under the laws of any other State, Government, or country, may be brought in this Court, by a resident of this State, for any cause of action.

The act of Congress authorizing the removal of actions from the State Courts, applies only to those actions as to which the original jurisdiction of the United States, and of the State Courts, is concurrent.

The fact that the defendant was regularly prosecuted in this Court, and that this Court has jurisdiction of the action, does not affect the question whether the defendant had a right to have the action removed.

The act of May 11, 1846, treats and speaks of the defendant as a Connecticut Corporation; grants to it, as such, certain privileges and powers, and reserves to the State that passed it the right to alter or repeal such act at any time.

The State of Connecticut, by an act passed in May, 1846, authorized the defendant to accept of the act passed by this State, and to exercise and enjoy all the rights, powers and privileges conferred thereby.

The defendant was created and exists by force of the act of the Legislature of the State of Connecticut. Another section of that State confirms to it all the powers and privileges which this State conferred. It might exercise and enjoy within the limits of this State.

If a Legislature of the State should repeal the act of May 11, 1846, it would nevertheless be an existing Corporation, which enjoyed powers conferred by its original Charter. If a Legislature of Connecticut should repeal the act of its incorporation, it would cease to exist.

It is a Corporation, created by the State of Connecticut; its locality is in that State, but has the privilege granted to it by the State of extending its road and running its cars within this State. This privilege and the exercise of it makes it none the less a Corporation, created and existing solely by force of the statute of the State of Connecticut.

The plaintiffs' affidavit states that "the principal, if not the whole business of said defendant, was transacted at their office in the City of New-York," down to the third of July last.

The business here referred to cannot mean that of carrying persons or property on the Railroad. That is the business which the Company was incorporated to transact.

That is wholly done in the State of Connecticut, except the transportation may be continued into, or commenced within the State of New-York.

The large business done at their office in the City of New-York, is probably not that which was designed by its charter or the act of this State, as its principal business, nor that which was expected to be a source of profit or loss to the Company.

I think the order of the 6th of April is a proper one to be made on the facts as they now appear, and that the motion to vacate it should be denied.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM—MAY 17.

Before Hon. Justice Roosevelt.

Goodwin vs. Bean.—In this case it appears that in August, 1854, Gilman Goodwin, the plaintiff, agreed to above up the east gable wall of house No. 46 West Fourteenth-street, in the best manner, for $325. He did the work, but the defendant has refused to pay him, and he now sues to recover the above amount with interest and costs.

The defence is that Goodwin agreed to perform the work in the best manner, but that it was very carelessly and unskillfully done, so that it settled and cracked, so that he sustained damage to the amount of $2,000, for which he demands judgment.

To the answer of the defendant, the plaintiff put in a reply denying that the work was done negligently, or that the walls sunk. Sealed verdict.

Chauncey Schaffer for plaintiff; Burrill, Davidson and Burrill for defendant.

Before Hon. Chief Justice Oakley.

Rice vs. Dingledein.—The Jury in this case, reported in yesterday's Times, brought in a verdict yesterday morning for the plaintiff for $160.

Trial for Murder.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.—MAY 17.

Before Hon. Recorder Smith.

THE FIRST MURDER CASE IN THIS COURT UNDER THE NEW LAW—TRIAL OF JOSEPH HALL FOR THE MURDER OF WILLIAM O'BRIEN ON NEW YEAR'S DAY—EXTRAORDINARY CASE.

Yesterday, the first case of murder ever tried in this Court, was conducted by the District Attorney for the people, and by Mr. Richard Busteed for the prisoner, before Hon. Recorder Smith. It will be remembered, that on the evening of last New-Year's Day, at a store in Grand-street, a man named O'Brien was suddenly shot by his bosom friend, named Joseph Hall, for some unaccountable reason—there being absolutely no motive for the deed, as the two men had always been noted for the warmest friendship—their purses, and all that they possessed, as was shown by witnesses yesterday, being held in common, and their mutual affection being more than brotherly. The District Attorney, in opening the case, remarked that it was the most extraordinary homicide he had ever heard of—an opinion which the Recorder, in his charge to the Jury, fully endorsed. Such a case, said the Recorder, is scarcely to be found in the annals of crime.

The District Attorney commenced by reading the following deposition of Dr. Wright, of the New-York City Hospital, taken before the Coroner, Dr. Wright being unable to attend in Court.

F. Markoe Wright, M. D., affirms and says: I am house-surgeon in the New-York Hospital; the deceased was admitted on the evening of the 1st of this month, between 8 and 9 o'clock, suffering from gun-shot wounds on the body; he lingered until about 3 o'clock on the evening of the 3d inst., when he died; autopsy revealed three penetrating wounds, one entering nearly over the ensiform cartilage of the sternum, glancing from the cartilage of the seventh rib, and the ball lodging under the skin about four inches from the point of entrance; this ball was extracted during the life of the patient; the second wound passed through the sixth rib on the right side, near its junction with the cartilage, passed through the diaphragm, through the right lobe of the liver, which was greatly enlarged; through the margin of the right kidney, and through the twelfth rib, the ball judging in the muscles over that rib; the third wound was found posteriorly entering between the ninth and tenth ribs, about two inches from the spinal column, passing directly through the chest and entering the lower lobe of the right lung, in the substance of which the ball was found; this lobe was completely engorged with blood and entirely impervious to air; some eight or ten ounces of blood and serum were found in the right side of the chest; I am of opinion that these injuries were the cause of his death.

F. MARKOE WRIGHT, M. D.

Taken January 5, 1855.

J. HILTON, Coroner.

After reading this deposition the District Attorney proceeded to call witnesses for the prosecution.

John Fitts deposed: I reside at No. 81 Grand-street, where I keep a grocery and feed store; I rented them on New-Year's Day last; I know the accused, Joseph Hall; I have known him seven or eight years; I knew O'Brien, the deceased; I had known him about three years; they came into my store about 4 o'clock on New-Year's night; my brother, Mr. Shaner, and myself were in the store; my brother went away before the occurrence took place. I came in from tea; Mr. Hall introduced me to his friends and O'Brien; he introduced me in a very joking way; he introduced Shaner as Sheriff Shaner; he said, if I would go down Broadway with him to an old woman's, he would "pay the shot," and I should see Bill O'Brien dance all over the room; the old woman would make him dance round the room, which was a paying table; the old woman was a spiritual medium. I told him I did not believe in any such thing as that; next he asked my brother to go with him; my brother answered that he did not wanted to go; then my brother left and went to his tea; Hall said to O'Brien, "you had better go home that time." Mr. Gooderson's foot today which belonged to me." O'Brien said, "I know it, I did, but you had to pay you money on account." He gave him to you to-morrow; then they had some conversation in a joking way which I took no notice of; they were perfectly sober, and good-hearted towards each other; I do not know whether they drank in my place or not; the next I heard was O'Brien saying to Hall, "Joe, I owe you two shillings;" Hall says, "But, it is seven shillings, and you gave seven shillings of the sheet of previous to that, he had paid. You shan't leave the house until you give me seven shillings;" then the pistol; at the time when I heard the noise I did not see him draw a pistol; I did not think he had a pistol; my first thought was that they were playing a joke; Jack O'Brien, Sal, and two others occurred right in upon one another; he was a Colt's six-barrelled revolver; O'Brien had no pistol; Hall fired three times; the shots were one immediately after the other; O'Brien might have fallen on the second shot, perhaps not till the third; O'Brien was not more than four or five feet from Hall; after O'Brien fell, Hall stepped forward and took his pistol between his knees, and drawing it up to his own ear, shot himself in the neck; then he stepped forward, falling on the floor near O'Brien; he fell on his right side, and kicked very confusedly; I was looking for a spittoon; while I was looking for one, Hall got up; he appeared to be a little more rational; he sat down and said he should die soon; I think O'Brien said, "Joe, I didn't think you would have done that;" Hall wanted them to go away, but I would not let him; I said he must go to the Station-house; Shaner went out when the third shot was fired; my brother came in; he was frightened as well as myself; I went along to the Station-house with Hall, and fell in with a Policeman, named George, a German; Hall told me to let go my hold of him, as he could walk well enough; he did not allude to the occurrence; when we got to the Station-house it was just 7½ o'clock; I left him there and ran back to my store; O'Brien said to me, "I didn't think Joe would have hurt the hair of my head;" Officer Lent was at the store; he sent for a litter, and wanted to help O'Brien to lie down upon it, but O'Brien walked to the litter and got upon it; he said he thought he could walk to the Hospital; he was carried there, and I never saw him afterwards.

Cross-examined by Mr. Busteed.—I have noticed the prisoner's manner; I have noticed what I thought were sudden fits of insanity; the last that I discovered of it was when I was sitting in a chair, and would hear a noise; he would start wildly and fall back in his chair; he would be telling about his travels in California, when he would suddenly start and turn pale; this would pass away in a minute and he would resume his former manner, only that the thread of his story would be interrupted, and he would go on to another subject; at the moment of his firing the pistol on the night in question, he had the most terrific look I ever saw; all was done so quick that I cannot say how long the look lasted; when I told him he should not leave the store, after the firing had taken place, he did not resist, but remained perfectly passive; he went to the Station-house with me; unacquainted by an officer.

By the Court.—For the last seven or eight months previous to the firing I had noticed these sudden paroxysms.

By the District Attorney.—I have often heard him talk about the spirit rappings; he seemed to be a believer in them; I think he had been to see a medium that night before he came to my store.

The District Attorney read the deposition of Mr. Shaner taken before the Coroner.

William T. Shaner, being sworn, says: I reside at No. 9 Chatham-street; I am the person who went present and referred to by the last witness; the occurrence spoken of took place on last Monday evening about seven o'clock; I went to Mr. Fitts's store in company with the accused and deceased; the men both seemed in dispute; the dispute was about a dollar; I said that the money had lost, and O'Brien had picked up of Mr. Gooderson's floor; the dispute was about the amount that O'Brien owed the accused; I have often seen them have similar disputes; it did not seem to be an angry dispute; after a short time the accused seemed suddenly seized with a fit of anger or excitement that I had never before seen him in; I saw him put his right hand to his left inside coat pocket; I was standing to the left of the accused; when he took his hand from his pocket I saw a pistol in it; he passed quickly behind me, and towards where O'Brien stood; I saw the pistol when he passed behind me and as the last of me; as soon as I saw the pistol in his hand, I caught hold of him around the body with my arms, and pulled both of his arms down; he exclaimed to O'Brien, "Jack, you owe me money, pay me that money;" he told me to let go of him, and I did so, and escaped to the left side of him, when he fired two shots; he was facing and about two or three feet from O'Brien, at the time; as O'Brien was falling he fired another shot at him; I then ran out of doors; we had been about two hours together, previous to the occurrence; I never More Mormon Troubles—Escape of the Murderers of Captain Gunnison.

We publish this morning, from a correspondent of the DAILY TIMES, full details of the trial of three Indians for the murder of Captain Gunnison and his companions. Our readers will recollect the excitement which pervaded the public mind when news of this bloody and brutal massacre reached this country, as well as the vigorous efforts made by the Government to detect and capture the savage miscreants by whom it was perpetrated. These efforts were successful. The murderers were captured, brought within the jurisdiction of the United States, and tried before the District Court in the Territory of Utah. The testimony was clear and undisputed. The accused parties were proved beyond all possibility of doubt to have been the murderers. No attempt even was made to rebut the evidence. The guilt of the Indians was conceded; and yet the Jury returned a verdict of manslaughter only. The facts stated by our correspondent show conclusively that this result is due entirely to the interference of the Mormons, who seem to be in league with the Indians in resisting the authority of the United States. The verdict was rendered by a Mormon Jury, acting under the direction of the Mormon leaders.

But the whole story is not yet told. The sentence of the Court was that the Indians, for this brutal massacre of eight or ten American citizens and soldiers should be imprisoned for three years. They were accordingly handed over to the authorities of Utah, (Mormons,) and committed to prison to serve out their terms. But within less than a week they were permitted to escape, and are again at large. We learn from our private correspondence that no doubt whatever is entertained by Col. STEPTOE and the authorities, that the whole thing has been brought about by the Mormons for the express purpose of conciliating the Indians and exasperating them against the Federal authority. For some time past, Mormon missionaries have been maintained among the Indians; and BRIGHAM YOUNG has proposed that intermarriage between the Indians and the Mormons be introduced and encouraged as rapidly as possible.

These occurrences indicate the commencement of a system of tampering with the Indians on the part of the Mormon leaders, from which the worst results may be apprehended. We have reason to believe that the United States authorities are fully alive to the extent of the danger, and are prepared to take such precautions as may be needful.

Concealed Weapons.

A strong effort is now being made in Louisiana to check by legal enactments the practice of carrying concealed weapons, which prevails to a very great extent throughout all the Southwestern States. This practice, in a civilized community, is reprehensible and cowardly, and has many times led to the commission of great atrocities and to terrible and bloody conflicts. There has always been a disposition to check this practice wherever it has existed, but owing to constitutional objections, it has been difficult to accomplish it effectually. One of the amendments to the Constitution of the United States, which was adopted by the several States, provides that the right of the people to keep and bear arms, shall not be infringed, and the spirit of this provision has been embodied in the constitution of most of the States. In the States of Kentucky, Tennessee and Mississippi, statutory provisions having reference to this subject have in consequence been declared unconstitutional. On the other hand, in the States of Indiana, Alabama and Arkansas, similar enactments have been sustained. In Georgia, a distinction has been taken between wearing arms secretly and wearing them openly, and statutes have been pronounced valid so far as they forbid the former act and invalid as to the latter. We are not aware of any statute in this State on this subject except that which makes it a felony to carry or use a sling-shot, or any weapon of a similar kind; and yet the practice of going armed prevails to a much greater extent among us than most persons imagine. One of the results of such a practice is disclosed in the late FOOLY tragedy. It certainly is very desirable that the power should exist somewhere of prohibiting the carrying deadly weapons in the midst of a peaceful community, and we should imagine that it would be competent to enact prohibitory laws on this subject as a matter of police regulation, and for the public security, without conflicting with the spirit of the Constitutional provisions which secure the right of carrying arms. In a great city like New-York, where people from every quarter are collected together, and the prejudices and passions of many different sections often clash together and result in fierce contentions, it would seem quite as necessary to legislate on this subject, as it has been found to be among the excitable populations of the South and West.

Alvarez and the Mexican Insurrection.

It would puzzle any one, and perhaps most of all the inhabitants of Guerrero themselves, to assign a just reason for their present armed opposition to the Government of the Mexican Republic. Supposing that the whole of that State, to a man, is hostile to SANTA ANNA's administration, the number is only some two hundred thousand out of a population of ten millions—and this small minority, composed chiefly of half savage Indians, living in a territory naturally impregnable, has been enabled to combat successfully with the civilization and intelligence of the whole country. Even if the principles for which these revolutionists contend were righteous, it is obvious that, from the paucity of their numbers, the utmost they can effect by following up their present course is to fan the flame of civil war, and drag their country down to a yet lower level of degradation.

The rise and progress of this insurrection may be briefly told. When SANTA ANNA was recalled by the popular voice in 1853, among the last to send in his adhesion was JUAN ALVAREZ, the leader and promoter of the present movement. Don JUAN was then Commandante of the South and Governor of Guerrero—a new State, created through his influence out of the southern portions of Puebla and Mexico. There he had long exercised the unbridled sway of a feudal chief, as many an act of arbitrary power would tend to prove; and his personal enmity to SANTA ANNA, as well as his inherent pride, made him loth to recognize the new President, or submit to his authority. He was, nevertheless, confirmed in his appointment of Commandante, and in addition, was offered, and he did not hesitate to accept, the Grand Cross of the Order of Guadalupe. These concessions, granted, no doubt, with the view of conciliating the wayward chief, did not produce the desired effect. ALVAREZ became more overbearing, and took no pains to disguise his jealousy of the Dictator's popularity and success. Even in the performance of his official duties, he seemed actuated by a wish to gratify personal vengeance rather than ameliorate his country's condition. He openly and pointedly disobeyed the laws that emanated from the Capital, without stopping to inquire whether they were beneficial or otherwise, and endeavored to thwart SANTA ANNA in all his projects. Finally, when the Republic was agitated by fears of fillibustering invasions from without, and treachery from within—when the star of WALKER's fortune was in the ascendant, and DE BOULNON contemplated a descent on the Pacific coast—it became necessary to send troops, with the utmost dispatch, to Acapulco, in order to preserve the integrity of the Republic. It has been alleged that ALVAREZ was in league with both WALKER and DE BOULNON; but, be this as it may, he, at any rate, refused to allow the troops destined for the protection of Acapulco to enter his territory, and the rude peasantry of the district, over whom he exercised unbounded control, lent him a willing support. Open hostilities ensued, and the insurgents were, in the main, victorious. SANTA ANNA's forces were literally decimated by pestilence, famine and skirmishes with the enemy, among his own mountains and forests. Fifteen months have elapsed, and this species of civil war still continues. It has saddled the country with vast expense, and brought it to the verge of ruin—it has checked trade, and widened the breach between the Spanish and Indian races. Secure among their mountains, the insurgents are content to live a semi-barbarous life, holding little intercourse with the rest of the world, and Guerrero to-day is to all intents and purposes an independent State. Unfortunately, these misguided men are not content with the advantages they have gained. They demand substantially, in their programme, the reduction of the tariff, the restoration of State Sovereignty, and the abdication of SANTA ANNA. The first would crush out the faint spark of native industry that remains. As to the question of State Sovereignty, the effect of such a scheme would be to make men like JUAN ALVAREZ totally irresponsible, either to the people on the one hand, or to the Central Government on the other. Even were this idea of State Sovereignty carried out on our own Republican plan, it would be utterly unsuited to a country like Mexico, where some States, such as Yucatan, are sparsely inhabited by half-civilized Indians. The demand for the resignation of SANTA ANNA is manifestly absurd, and will appear the more so, when we reflect that the Dictator has been three times, in as many years, reelected to the high office he now occupies, by an overwhelming majority.

A certain romance has hitherto been thrown around the life and history of JUAN ALVAREZ, and has clothed him to some extent in the garb of a patriot and a hero. Those who look beneath the outward apparel, and examine the actions of the man rather than trust to his specious pretensions, will find him but little above the level of a bandit chief. He who, without end or aim, has recklessly plunged his country into the horrors of civil war, and as recklessly feeds the flame for his own selfish ends, cannot safely be entrusted with the guidance of that country's destinies. One of the first principles of true Republicanism, is to yield with a good grace to the will of the majority; but this, JUAN ALVAREZ and his adherents do not seem to understand. They complain loudly of the arbitrary decrees of SANTA ANNA and his Council—many of which we, indeed, would be sorry to defend; but, as between one party and the other, nothing could be more arbitrary or tyrannical than the manner in which the Pluto Chief has lately expelled those persons from his territory who were suspected of being opposed to his assumption of Supreme Power. All who wish well to the cause of Republican freedom in Mexico—if they would see order restored, and civilization advance with steady progress—must be satisfied that the present insurrection is in every way opposed to the best interests of that unhappy country.

Bird Island—Where is Mr. Marcy.

Some months ago the sloop-of-war Falmouth was ordered down to the Caribbean Sea, to protect the rights of American citizens who had been driven from Bird Island, and its guano deposits, by a Venezuelan armed ship. As usual, when wanted the ship was not ready to go. She came into port, had to refit, and then was sent to Cuba instead of the place first named. The facts of this case must be fresh in the memory of our readers. In 1854 an American sea captain discovered that one of a group of barren rocks in the Caribbean Sea, known as Ilas Aves, contained valuable deposits of guano. Reporting his discovery to his principals in the United States, PHILO S. SHELTON and other merchants of Boston and New-York, sent several vessels to the island with laborers, tools, building materials, and everything necessary to be used in getting out the guano and shipping it to market. They thus took possession of the island, but had scarcely got fairly at work ere the Venezuelan force came upon and drove them from the place, claiming that the sovereignty was in Venezuela.

This claim of Venezuela is clearly unfounded; and we question whether she will attempt to sustain it. She cannot claim the island because of contiguity to her coasts, for it is at least six hundred miles distant from her, while it is only one-third that distance from French, English, Dutch and Danish territory. The island, when found by Mr. SHELTON's agents, so far as any evidence can be obtained, had never been inhabited. Indeed it is uninhabitable, containing not a blade of grass, a tree, a shrub, or a foot of soil. Nor have we any evidence that title to it was ever claimed by anybody prior to SHELTON's operations there. It was derelict territory, belonging to nobody, and the rightful property of any one who should first choose to assume its sovreignty, and exercise acts of ownership. After SHELTON took possession, England sought to claim it because it was once surveyed by some British subject, who doubtless looked at it to see if it was worth picking up, and decided negatively. Such a claim cannot be recognized, because even discovery, without occupation, does not of itself confer title. Discovery, to confer title, must be followed by actual occupation or possession, and the exercise and continued assertion of control over the territory discovered. This argument, so far as any facts have yet been presented, effectually puts at rest all claims to Bird Island, no matter by who made, prior to SHELTON.

But the claim of Venezuela was merely a pretext, under which certain parties connected with the Government undertook to drive out the SHELTON settlers, for the benefit of a party of Philadelphia speculators, who agreed to pay some sixty thousand dollars for the job. As an evidence that they never supposed they had a clear title to the island, we may mention that, before proceeding upon their fillibustering enterprise, the Venezuelans applied to the Danish authorities of St. Thomas, and procured their pledge not to interfere in the programme. So, the Venezuelans drove out the SHELTON men, broke up their business, and seized their tools and other property remaining upon the island. Their triumph, however, was short—the Dutch from Curacoa having in turn routed the Venezuelans, whose clients—the Philadelphia speculators—had not yet accomplished any extensive sale of rights as they had contemplated, and so were unable to meet their drafts in favor of the fillibusters, all of which have been protested.

This is the case as it now appears. There can be scarce a doubt that serious and positive injury has been inflicted upon worthy American citizens, without excuse or palliation. This is no case of anticipated wrong. It is one where wrong has been done, and is still doing—and where prompt interference may save large accumulation of the wrong. The sovereignty of the Island exists somewhere; and it seems to rest in Mr. SHELTON, and through him in the Government to which he owes allegiance. While his property is in other hands he loses the use of it; and if those who now hold the Island are carrying away its riches, as is probable, every day's delay adds grievously to the injury which Mr. SHELTON has sustained. Our Government ought at once either assert his rights for him and maintain them, or else permit him to take such measures of self-protection as may be necessary to save him further harm. Surely, in such an emergency as this, Mr. MARCY might be able to get the services of a single vessel of the Cuban squadron, to redress an outrage upon the flag, already committed, and an injury to a citizen, so clear and palpable as this.

The California Senator.

The Senatorial election in California has assumed a new and important phase. In consequence of a serious division in the Democratic party in the Legislature, notwithstanding they have a large majority in that body, numerous ineffectual ballotings for a United States Senator, to succeed Dr. GWIN, were had. On none of these was a majority vote given for any candidate; and it was generally supposed that the election had therefore failed altogether. It is now claimed by the Editorial Correspondent of the Placer Times and Transcript, at Sacramento, that Dr. GWIN was constitutionally chosen his own successor upon the first ballot, in January last. The grounds upon which this claim is based, are briefly these:

The Constitution of California provides that in all elections by the Legislature "a plurality of votes shall constitute a choice, where not otherwise directed in this Constitution." On the first ballot, Dr. GWIN received forty-two votes, and Mr. EDWARDS, the next highest candidate, thirty-six votes, which gave the former a plurality of six. It is stated that the Doctor will present himself at Washington, at the commencement of the next Session of Congress, and claim his seat, and let his right to it be decided by the Senate, which has the sole power to judge of the election of its members. The Doctor is exceedingly popular in the Senate, and well deserves to be. If he comes before it with his credentials, there is little doubt that he will be allowed to take his seat, and to hold it. This will make one wing of the Democratic party in California exceedingly unhappy; but the State at large will profit greatly by the continuance of the Doctor's energetic and judicious services as its Representative in the upper branch of Congress. We publish in another column the comments of the Times and Transcript upon this subject.

George Law and the Captors of Baker.

Full justice has not been done to our fellow-citizen Mr. LAW, for his instrumentality in the pursuit and capture of BAKER, over which the public is now rejoicing. The public officers, zealous for the apprehension of the fugitive, would have been powerless without his aid.

The expedition of the Grapeshot in pursuit of BAKER was suggested by Mr. LAW, as in his judgment the best way to effect the object, rather than to send a steamship, even if one could be procured, which he did not suppose possible. That the suggestion should not be fruitless, he tendered the use of the vessel without charge. It was not then doubted that the City authorities would cheerfully assume the responsibility of manning and fitting her out. But when the subject was presented to the Mayor's attention by Judge STUART, he found his discretion in such matters confined to an outlay of $250, while the estimates for the voyage exceeded $1,500, and the Mayor did not choose to assume any responsibility beyond the letter of the law. It was not a case in which his zeal prompted him to the exercise of "doubtful powers." And here would have ended the efforts so long and arduously pursued by Judge STUART, and BAKER would have rejoiced in final escape from punishment or trial, had not Mr. LAW generously taken upon himself the entire charge of the enterprise. His conference with Judge STUART and the Mayor was on the afternoon of March 16, and on the evening of the 17th the Grapeshot was ready for sea, having received her ballast, provisions, captain and crew, after the close of the interview. There was much mystery about the concealment of BAKER. Private persons interested to procure his arrest, were able to trace him from one hiding place to another, but found him uniformly warned of the approach of danger, in season to elude their pursuit. The police, meanwhile, with their superior facilities and ubiquitous watchfulness, could gain no trace of him except by following in the wake of those whose zeal was the offspring of private motives. It seemed evident that the culprit was aided by connivance on the part of at least a portion of the police force. Justice was betrayed by her ministers. Under these circumstances and with these impressions, Mr. LAW came to the aid of Judge STUART and those members of the police who desired to vindicate the reputation of their body and sustain the cause of impartial justice. When it was ascertained that BAKER had sailed in the Isabella Jewett, Mr. LAW indicated the manner in which a successful pursuit might be made, and provided the means, ship, men, and money, for its consummation. It has proved successful.

A proposition made on Wednesday night in the Common Council, to pay each of the Police Officers engaged in this expedition $500 extra, was voted down. Such a proposition was probably unjust; but we presume some steps will be taken to make such extra payment in the case as equity may require. We observe that BAKER is inclined to complain of excessive zeal and vigilance on the part of some of his captors: and we hear intimations from various quarters that his complaints are not without foundation, and that he was treated with needless rigor and severity. We see nothing in the statements thus far published which lead us to give any weight whatever to these representations.

The Prohibitory Law.

We publish elsewhere an opinion of Judge CONKLING in support of the constitutionality of the newly enacted Prohibitory LAW, against the objections of NICHOLAS HILL, Jr. Like everything from Judge C.'s pen, it is clear, explicit and able: whether its argument will be conclusive or not, can, of course, only be known after the Court of Appeals shall have taken action on the subject. Judge C. also assails the opinions recently given upon this law by our District Attorney and Corporation Counsel. The former, however, has been sustained by the Court of Sessions, and is now acted upon in this City. We trust an early occasion will be embraced to test these several opinions, and the validity of the law to which they refer, in our Court of last resort: for until that is done, there can, of course, be no fixed public sentiment, and no harmony of action, upon the subject. If the law is sustained, it will generally be obeyed; if not, a new one must be made.

English Law of Copyright.

The English Vice-Chancelor WOOD has lately sustained Mr. LOVER's title to his "Low-backed Chair," a favorite song which he set to an old Irish air, and contemporaneously registered in pursuance of the provisions of the respective Copyright laws, both in England and in this country during his late residence here.

The defendant took the "Chair" and published it in the Musical Treasury, and insisted that he was justified in so doing, inasmuch as Mr. LOVER had published his song previously in the United States. But the Vice Chancelor enjoined the defendant from selling the work upon the plaintiff's stipulating to bring an action against him, for the purpose of testing the legal rights of the parties.

Mr. LOVER's case, it will be noticed, is much stronger than Mr. BOOGEY's, decided in the House of Lords—inasmuch as the former claimed that a foreigner could not obtain an English copyright by first publishing, while a resident abroad, a work in England. Although the reverse would be true if the foreigner, at the time of the first publication, were domiciled in England.

Managing the Press.

A file of old newspapers is a magazine of explosive materials, and we wonder that more care is not taken in preserving such a cheap, and, at the same time invaluable repertory of the means of warfare. It is hardly possible that any man worth demolishing at any time can have so lived, or conducted himself, as to keep himself out of the papers, and his antecedents will, at some time or other, furnish the necessary material for blowing him up. A very amusing illustration of this has just been given by the Evening Post, which has always been rather given to archæological explorations. Our readers are probably aware, from certain intimations in the operatic criticisms of the DAILY TIMES, that the Academy of Music, in Fourteenth-street, has on its staff of managers, "a gentleman who manages the Press." This gentleman, it is pretty generally known, is the famous Chevalier WIKOFF, who was himself, once the editor and proprietor of a daily paper called the Republic, which was published, by the way, on the very corner from which our own sheet is issued. Previous to his managing the Republic, it is also known, that the Chevalier managed the famous dancer, FANNY ELSLER, when she was in this country. He also managed the Herald manager at that time, but somehow did it so mal-adroitly that he incurred the active malignity of that paper, which used to "pitch into him" every morning in a manner more amusing to a gossip-loving public than to himself. Since his return from his Gamble-ing expedition to Genoa, and the publication of his Countship, the Chevalier has commenced the management of the Herald manager once more, and with such success as to make his services as general manager of the Press desirable to the management of the Academy.

The Chevalier, unfortunately for his present position, had published in his paper the Republic, a full and particular account of the manner in which he originally managed the Herald, which will be likely to create a suspicion of the heartiness of the entente cordiale now existing between these distinguished parties. Mr. WIKOFF says:

> I had informed Mlle. ELSLER of the disagreeable necessity of cancelling this odious paper, (the Herald,) and she therefore consented to receive its Editor. He called ten minutes after her arrival at the Astor-house Hotel, and offered his pen and journal, unconditionally, for her use. I accepted it, on her behalf, and he straightway began the most extravagant "puffs."
> Before her departure for Havana, the Winter of the same year, Mlle. ELSLER presented Mrs. BENNETT with a rich gold bracelet of the value of a hundred dollars. Her surprise may be easily imagined at learning afterwards that an abominable attack had been made on her during her absence, and which was systematically repeated till she was on the point of abandoning the country in dismay; for, in all her European experience, she had never met an individual so lost to decency, so sunk in debasement as this man, who had courted her favor, received her presents for his wife, only to repay both with incurable infamy.
> I suggested to her the only apparent means to stay this foul stream of slander, and on her arrival in New-York, in the summer of 1841, she bought at STORE & MORTIMER's, Broadway, a service of silver for near $600, and a case of jewels, consisting of ear-rings and necklace of about the same amount, and presented them to Mrs. BENNETT, who received them, of course, most willingly.
> "Having been made to comprehend the tenure upon which BENNETT accorded his services, Mlle. ELSLER kept up a pretty active fire of presents during her engagement—among others, two splendid dresses for Mrs. BENNETT. And in return "puffs" were regularly inserted, but of a character so vulgar and ridiculous that Mlle. ELSLER would rather have paid to escape them.
> Before her departure for Havana, in February, 1842, she again presented Mrs. BENNETT, with a rich silver dressing case, bought in New-York, and a writing desk of great beauty. But as I knew his venal pen was given to scurrility as the sparks fly upwards, I intimated plainly that if he renewed his brutalities during her approaching trip to Havana, he might expect from me certain exposures that would involve him fatally with the many honorable members of the New-York Press, he has so often and insolently outraged. He understood and feared me.
> This time Mlle. ELSLER escaped any further annoyance, but on her return to New-York in '42 she received her presents, and even up to the hour of her departure from this country, she was under tribute to this craving shark of the press. The last present was a gold pencil case to BENNETT, who managed to encounter her just before her embarkation in Boston.

These newspaper reanscitations are as valuable as they are amusing. They show how a certain Press was managed only fourteen or fifteen years ago; and as the Chevalier has once more established the most intimate and friendly relations with his old adversary, the public will not be slow in coming to a conclusion as to the means employed in bringing these old friends together. The Managers of the Academy have expressed a strong desire to gain the good opinion and countenance of the Herald, and through the diplomatic adroitness of the gentleman who once showed himself so capable of mollifying and satisfying its proprietor, they appear to have succeeded.

☞ Prof. AMASA MCCOY succeeds Mr. W. H. BURLEIGH as Editor of the Prohibitionist, the monthly organ of the State Temperance Alliance. Prof. McC. is a gentleman of ability, earnest in his advocacy of Temperance, and likely to give the paper increased efficiency and popularity. In a brief announcement of the change, which we publish elsewhere, the Executive Committee introduce a letter from the venerable President NOTT speaking of the new editor as "a young man of no common talents, of high morals, and of great decision of character; a fine speaker, a fine writer, and a distinguished scholar."

The Court of General Sessions.

The first capital case under the new law was tried yesterday in the Court of General Sessions. It was a most interesting trial—one which, in the opinion of the Recorder and the District Attorney, was almost unprecedented in any criminal Court. A full report will be found in another page.

By the arrival of the Orizaba, at New-Orleans, we have advices from Vera Cruz to the 8th inst., both from the city of Mexico to the 4th.

The rapids throughout the country to be in the same comfortable condition.

Santa Anna, as already announced, had left the Capital for the theatre of projected disturbances, stopped over night at Puebla, and then pursued his journey. A report had got into circulation in the City of Mexico that a body of troops, between him and Vera Cruz, had revolted, and that he was in pursuit of them.

The Mexican Government had ordered the confiscation of all property, except that under treaties emanating from this.

Sickness still continued to prevail in the City of Mexico, particularly the small-pox, which has made great ravages.

Elections were dragging along very languishingly in the Santa Anna theatre of Mexico. The celebrated Matilde Diez, however, was expected to arrive there by the 5th, and to infuse life and spirit into them. Another well known orator, Don Manuel Angosta, had arrived at Vera Cruz, and the Eco says that if he were added to the company with Senors Diez, the Gamboa Amor and Ramirez, he would be a valuable acquisition.

Fancy Doyle, Esq., the British Minister in Mexico, had arrived at Vera Cruz, and was about to leave Mexico for a short time.

On the 30th of April, the Supreme Government had, it is said, 4,000 troops concentrated in the capital of Michoacan.

Lieut. Don Jose Maria Pina had been pardoned by Santa Anna. He had been sentenced to six years' imprisonment in a fortress and dismissed from the army, for having fought a duel with the Spanish Consul at Tampico.

The American brigantine Cohden, which was wrecked off Tobasco on the 5th ult., was to be sold by auction with her cargo of logwood and mahogany, on the 20th.

The General states that late letters from Puruandiro give accounts of great horrors committed there by the Indians. The place was attacked by a band of 1,500, led by Pueblita and others of the most abandoned revolutionary stamp. With only eighty soldiers, and a portion of the inhabitants armed with carbines, swords, &c., the population defended themselves more than thirty hours, after which they succumbed for want of artillery. All the houses of the place were then pillaged, with the exception of four. The military commander, Valbuena, and his family, were shot, and the wife of the latter severely wounded. Many of the principal inhabitants were beheaded, and many women were violated and carried off on the rebels retiring.

Senor Monzon has been appointed political and military commandant of the district of Tampico, and has entered his office taking possession of the office.

The voyage of Santa Anna, according to an official communique, has been undertaken for the double purpose of improving his health and endeavoring to put down the revolutionists. He was accompanied by the Minister of War, Gen. Blanco, and Gen. Carrera. The position he military command in Mexico during his absence had been offered to the noble and patriotic Don Miguel Cervantes, till Gen. Rangel Diaz as da Vega should arrive, which he did on the 30th ult., and took possession of the command the next day. The Secretaries of State were charged with the dispatch of ordinary business. The official communication above referred to, which is addressed to the Heads of Departments, charges them to prevent or punish all attempts at disturbing order which may be made by the factious during the absence of Santa Anna from the capital.

Fifteen rebels taken prisoners at Panzacingo have been pardoned, on promising not to take arms against the Government.

Lower California is said to be prospering. A short time ago some alarm was created by a report that one Chavez, joined with an American gambler from Upper California, had arrived at San Diego with the intention of invading the territory. On the arrival of Commodore Mervine with fifty men, however, the adventurers are said to have put themselves in safety. Measures had been taken to meet any filibuster attack that might be made.

The Esperanza, of Mazatlan, says that upwards of a thousand men of war had arrived at San Blas for the use of the Mexican steamers of war which are to ply in the Pacific.

Re-Election of Senator Gwin.

Correspondence of the Picayune Times and Transcript.

SENATORIAL ELECTION—THE NEW PLAN WHICH IT HAS ADOPTED.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., April 22, 1856.

The Senatorial question has assumed a new phase at the Capital, which has created no little fluttering in the dove-cotes of the Democracy. Dr. Gwin was constitutionally elected Senator on the first ballot that took place in the Joint Convention of the two Houses of the Legislature, in January last. On that ballot he received 62 votes, and Mr. Edwards, the next highest candidate, 36, which gave Gwin a plurality of 26 votes.

The 20th section of the 4th article of our State Constitution declares, that "In all elections by the Legislature, the members thereof shall vote aloud, and the votes shall be entered on the Journal."

Section 30 in article eleven declares, that "A plurality of votes given at any election, shall constitute a choice, where not otherwise directed in this Constitution."

Under these clauses to our Constitution, Dr. Gwin is clearly elected United States Senator. "A plurality of votes given at any election, shall constitute a choice." In the Constitution of no other State of the Union, except California, is it declared that a plurality of votes shall constitute a choice in "ANY ELECTION," and until that clause is altered, the Legislature can pass no law that conflicts with it.

This view of the question, as we before said, has quite changed the aspect of affairs here. Dr. Gwin, it seems, was fully aware of his constitutional right to a seat in the Senate, but was most anxious to harmonize the Democratic party by getting all the members of that party in the Legislature into caucus, to ratify the nomination conferred upon him at the preliminary meeting of the caucus, and then for joint convention confirm his election by their votes. Since his return home he and his friends have labored assiduously to bring about this result, not because they entertained any doubt as to his constitutional right to his seat, but to harmonize the party and let it go into the approaching fight in the next Legislature, with a unbroken front in the next election, when, but for the contest, it would be a beautiful an influence in destroying the harmony of the party during the session, with a few, very few, factious leets in the Legislature, have thus far frustrated these efforts, and it is likely to close with the feud of the last year continued by the factious course of the minority, who, under the lead of unprincipled demagogues, are determined to rule or ruin. They may be successful to the extent of lacking debate at the next election, for the Democracy will bag to contend not only with the Whigs, Know-Nothings and Independents, but the "flying artillery" of the present Legislature, who, with their outside leaders and abettors, will be driven in disgrace and humiliation from the pale of the party. But the Senatorial question, for Dr. Gwin to be constitutionally chosen, and will protect himself at the hand of the Senate at the commencement of the next session, with the evidence of that fact; and as that body is the sole judge, under the Federal Constitution, of the election of its members, its act in admitting him to his seat will be the final disposition of the case.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

TO THE PUBLIC.

☞ When the Blood is Healthy, the stomach and bowels become disordered, the mental faculties prostrated, and the whole human system diseased and deranged,—the great secret then is to

for if the blood be only pure, the body must be in a healthy state, and free from disease

DR. TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA,

as manufactured under the direction and supervision of Dr. JAMES R. CHILTON, the most celebrated Chemist and Physician in this country,

NEVER FAILS TO PURIFY THE BLOOD.

It is THE ONLY GENUINE SARSAPARILLA put up in this country, and is manufactured from the very best imported Honduras SARSAPARILLA, in combination with other vegetable substances, which science and experience have proved useful in ERADICATING DISEASE FROM THE SYSTEM.

We would PARTICULARLY CAUTION the Public against using other preparations purporting to be Extracts of Sarsaparilla, as many of them are prepared by persons at all acquainted with the properties of the ingredients which they use; and, in these cases, the chance of using them may be dissatisfied and fatal to the patient, from the want of proper experience in the compounder. Thousands who have used these other preparations in vain, can't testify that DR. TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA is the

which will effectually eradicate disease, cleanse the system, restore a healthy action to all the functions of the body, and

KEEP THE BLOOD PURE.

BANCROFT'S MISCELLANIES.
HARPER AND BROTHERS,
Pearl-st., Franklin-square,
PUBLISH THIS DAY:
BANCROFT'S MISCELLANIES.
LITERARY AND HISTORICAL MISCELLANIES. By George Bancroft. 8vo, muslin, $2; half calf, $5 50.

This volume comprises essays on several miscellaneous subjects, studies in German literature, with notices of the principal authors in that language, and political transactions; studies historical, including various elaborate monographs on important topics; and occasional addresses. Among which are a tribute to John Calvin, an eulogy on William Ellery Channing, and the recent discourse before the Historical Society, on the Progress of the Human Race. Embracing a series of compositions that spread over an interval of more than thirty-five years, and, of course, many of them written during the early youth of the author, as well as the mature vigor of his manhood, the volume will afford an interesting illustration of the progress of his mind, the modes of his literary culture, and the development of his opinions, with the outstanding point of his brilliant career in that noble product of American literature, the History of the United States. The intrinsic value of its contents will make it welcome to all intelligent readers, while the lovers of literary history will follow with curious interest, the course of study and of thought which has ripened into such a pure and exalted fame.

HARPER & BROTHERS HAVE JUST PUBLISHED.

I.

HISTORY FOR BOYS;

OR ANNALS OF THE NATIONS OF MODERN EUROPE. By John G. Edgar, author of "The Boyhood of Great Men," and "The Footprints of Famous Men." With illustrations. 12mo., Muslin, 60 cents.

The annals of the modern European nations are here narrated, in a concise and agreeable style, somewhat resembling Scott's "Tales of a Grandfather." The narrative is remarkably compact, without being obscure from its brevity. The language is not let down to the supposed level of a child's comprehension, but, while it is animated, it is uniformly chaste and dignified. It is a good book for beginners in the study of history of all ages. It would be valuable in families as a convenient book of reference, as well as in schools.

From the Ritchbury Review.

The present work is incomparably interesting as what it is and professes to be, a picture of Chinese every-day life; a description, perhaps more accurate than any other that has yet appeared, of the strange nation at home—that is, in the heart of the empire. Such opportunities for accurate observation have seldom or never been enjoyed by any other person. * We cordially recommend these volumes to general perusal. Description and incident are interspersed with abundance of reflection, generally just, often original, sometimes profound. The whole style is imbued with a certain quiet felicity and elegance, which render this traveler's books among the most interesting we know.

[illegible] Bay City and the British Consulate—Extraordinary Revelations.

[illegible]

SIR: Having perceived by an abstract from the Philadelphia Journal, published in the NEW-YORK DAILY TIMES, that the circumstances of the American steamer Bay City having been obliged to leave Jo and be overhauled by H. B. M. sloop Bonetta, has been put before the public in a manner to produce the impression that that vessel was delivered up to a party of wanton outlaws and pirates in what Capt. WARREN, of the Bay City, endeavored to tell us her arrival here, and in consequence of my refusal on sign on the United States Consulate the information he perhaps, I have suffered imprisonment and much personal inconvenience, to the great detriment of my health. I shall, perhaps, give you a concise statement of what actually took place between the Bay City and the British man-of-war.

NEW-YORK CITY.

THE JEWS' HOSPITAL.

SERVICES OF INAUGURATION.

THE BANQUET AT DELMO'S.

The inauguration of the first charitable building devoted solely to the alleviation of the distresses of poor Jews ever erected in the United States, took place in this City yesterday.

THE BUILDING.

This is located in Twenty-eighth-street, between Seventh and Eighth avenues, is of brick, four stories high above the basement; ninety-eight feet deep; stands on a lot fifty by two hundred feet, and has a wing on each side appropriated to offices and private patients. Within it is encompassed with a view to neatness, convenience and comfort. The ceilings are about sixteen feet high. The basement is occupied for the refectory, kitchen, &c. The office is on the first floor, and within it, on a marble tablet in the wall, is inscribed:

"Erected to the memory of JUDAH TOURO, whose liberal bequest to this Institution is hereby acknowledged by the Directors in the erection of this memorial."

In the Synagogue, which is on the second floor of the wing, are erected four large tablets, bearing the names of donors to the institution, stating the amounts of their gifts from $50 to $100. The entire height of the building is 70 feet. It presents a plain, bold and tasteful front. Over the main entrance from the street is a panel with the following inscription, mostly in Hebrew characters:

HOUSE OF THE SICK.

Incorporated.....5612 | Erected.....5614

The edifice is capable of accommodating 120 patients. It stands on ground 50 feet wide by 200 feet deep, a portion of which, extending through to Twenty-seventh-street, is laid out as a garden or promenade, and is enclosed by a neat iron railing, 10 feet high. Two of the four wards the liberal donation of SAMPSON SIMPSON, Esq. The entire cost of the ground and building was $36,000.

The officers of the institution are:

President—JOHN J. HART.
Vice-President—BENJAMIN NATHAN.
Treasurer—H. HENDRICKS.
Secretary—T. BEZNIA.
Trustees—JOSIAH S. PHILLIPS, JOHN A. DAVIS, JOHN NATHAN, ISAAC PHILIPS.

THE INAUGURATION EXERCISES.

They were in accordance with the Israelite ritual, and took place in the large ward on the third floor of the Hospital. A large number of persons were present, a great proportion of whom were ladies. The opening prayer was made by Rev. J. J. LYONS, at 12½ o'clock, and in its enunciation, the Committee bearing the Sacred Guards of the Law appeared at the door of the Synagogue, where, standing under a canopy, they exclaimed:

"Open unto us the gates of righteousness, we will enter them, and praise the Lord."

The doors of the Synagogue being opened, the bearers entered in procession with the scrolls, Rev. L. ROSENBERG with the chant chanting:

How goodly are thy tents, O Jacob! thy tabernacles, O Israel! I have ever loved the habitation of thy house, and the dwelling place of thy glory.

We will come into thy tabernacles, and worship at thy footstool.

Enter into His gates with thanksgiving, into His courts with praise.

Come let us worship and bow down, let us bend the knee before the Lord our Maker.

Worship the Lord with gladness, come into His presence with singing song.

Come, let us sing unto the Lord, sing aloud to the Rock of our Salvation. Let us approach his presence with thanksgiving, and sing joyful hymns unto him.

The procession then proceeded until it arrived at the Ark, during which the reader and choir sang the following:

Blessed be he who cometh in the name of the Lord, we bless you from the house of the Lord.

At the conclusion of the chorus the procession proceeded to circumambulate the synagogue seven times. At each circuit a Psalm was chanted by a reader and the choir: The first circuit, Psalm XXX., chanted by Rev. A. LEE, with choir. Second circuit, Psalm XXIV., chanted by Rev. L. ROSENBERG, with choir. Third circuit, Psalm LXXIII., chanted by Rev. Mr. REMAK, with choir. Fourth circuit, Psalm XCIII., chanted by Rev. Mr. COHEN, with choir. Fifth circuit, Psalm XCIII., chanted by Rev. Mr. WATERMAN and choir. Sixth circuit, Psalm XIX., chanted by Rev. Mr. SCHECHAN, with choir. Seventh circuit, Psalm C., chanted by Rev. Mr. TRESSER, with choir.

At the conclusion of the seventh circuit, the last in the procession placed his scroll in the Ark, followed by the rest, who then returned to their seats.

Rev. Dr. RAPHALL then read the following:

Special Prayer—Our God, the God of our fathers; Lord, merciful and gracious; fountain of life and happiness; who hast formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; unto Thee we pour forth our supplications. We beseech Thee, Lord! look down from thy holy dwelling place in Heaven, upon this house which thy children, the people of Israel, have created and dedicated to thy name, that it be an Asylum and Hospital for persons afflicted with sickness, and whose bodily pains would become aggravated by the mental anguish of helpless misery and utter destitution.

Lord, God of the spirits of all flesh, who bringest man low even to extremity, and then sayest, return ye sons of men; vouchsafe to extend thy pleasant mercy unto this house, and to thy ministering angels and help unto the distressed, who shall here be received. For thou, Lord, desest wondrous and then ordaiest naught that can restrain Thee from helping and redeeming those that are brought nigh unto death, restoring life unto them, that they sink not into the grave—whenever such be thy gracious will. But if, in thy inscrutable decree, the days of any sufferer within the Hospital be determined, so that his time be come, and he expire, let him not, we beseech Thee, go down to the grave in anguish of spirit; but let him be gathered to his people, his heart resigned and trustful, when he has penitentially returned unto Thee in truth and uprightness, and that Thou will not suffer his soul to sink guilty, but will embrace him in the bond of life everlasting.

Incline our hearts, we pray thee, that we may abundantly answer this Abode of Charity, each one of us according to the means which thy blessing hath entrusted to him. Extend thy protection unto us, and to the Rulers of this united Commonwealth who are not of the seed of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, thy servants, that we and our fellow citizens, under the shadow of thy wings, may live with them in amity and peace, as we should dwell together. Let their hearts incline to pity in the land, and do thou preserve them, at all times, safe and at their coming in, in peace.

O Lord, our God, in thy eyes all men are equal, and none favored above the humblest on high dust hearken to, and bless, the prices for help of merit man, graciously inclines thine ear unto the thanksgiving and unto the prayer wherewith we inaugurate this Hospital. Thou art thy mercies have helped us. O, never let thy grace forsake us; but from all disease and evil deliver us, for thine alone art the true and Universal Benefactor, who workest wonderously. Amen.

The ark was again opened, and the following prayer was read in English:

May he who discoveth salvation unto kings and dominion unto princes, whose kingdom is the kingdom of all worlds universe, who deliveredst his servant David from the sword of destruction; who maketh a way in the sea, and a path in the mighty waters; may He bless, preserve, guard, assist, exalt, aggrandize, and extend the highest station the President of the United States of America; the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor of this State, and the magistrates of this City. May the King of all earthly kings (through his mercies) incline their hearts, preserve them from every adversity, and save them from all danger, ordain nations to bow down before them, and kings their princes and their counsellors, with the spirit of wisdom upon us and all Israel. In their days and in ours may Judah be saved, and Israel dwell in security, and the Redeemer come upon Zion; O, may such be the divine will, and let us say, Amen.

Brief addresses in English, were then made by Rev. Dr. RAPHALL, Rev. E. A. HENRY, Rev. Dr. MERCHAUSEN, Rev. Dr. LILIENTHAL and Rev. J. M. ISAACS. Rev. Dr. MERCHAUSEN concluded his address by reading the prayer for the dead for the departed JUDAH TOURO.

BANQUET IN AID OF THE HOSPITAL.

In the evening a banquet and ball in aid of the hospital, came off in DELMO'S Saloon. The attendance which was unusually large and brilliant, was distinguished by an unique and characteristic display of female grace and loveliness. At least five hundred ladies and gentlemen took part in the entertainments of the night. Mr. JOHN J. HART, the venerable President, occupied the chair. The Vice Presidents seat was appropriated by Mr. BENJAMIN NATHAN. The Grace and Prayer, after supper, were chanted, in the peculiarly soothing and solemn tones of the Hebrew ceremonial, by Messrs. Rev. J. J. LYONS and ANTHON LEE, respectively. At the close of the supper, the President announced, amid applause, the first regular toast, as follows:

The Jews' Hospital in New-York—Founded by faith and erected by charity; may its usefulness never cease to be felt.

Rev. Mr. LEE, in responding to this toast, said that having had the unmerited honor—the unreserved distinction of responding to the first toast, he should confine himself to the prominent trait, because the appreciation of his worthiness was not confined to any class, and good men of every creed were interested by their inward monitor that that sentiment sanctified alike the powers of the intellect and the feelings of the heart. Whatever might have been the faults of the Israelites, the historian was obliged to admit that their charity was unbounded and their history was unparalleled. But this was the law to be transferred to here, because they lived in a free land—a land in which the Jew and Gentile met together in friendly intercourse and mutual interchange of benevolent feeling.

On looking around this scene they would behold the Lieutenant Governor of the State on his right, (loud and protracted applause,) and the various liberal professions on his left and all around the room. (Renewed applause.) On looking deeper still they would discover angels and men joining hand in hand and heart in heart in perpetuating this sentiment of human charity, and realizing the best instincts of human nature. The reverend gentleman then read a communication from S. I. JOHNSON, Esq., President of the Society for the Education of Poor Children, accompanied by a donation of $50, and promising an annual contribution of the same amount for the benefit of the body of which he was the principal officer. (Loud applause.)

The President proposed the next toast:

The President of the United States and the Federal Government.

Mr. JOACHIMSEN, the Assistant United States Attorney, responded. Being seated at the opposite end of the apartment from that at which the reporters were placed, the learned gentleman's remarks were inaudible. He was loudly applauded, however, by the hearers in his vicinity. We understood him to speak in fastening terms of his connection with the National Government, of his confidence in the good intentions with which the national affairs were administered, of his belief in the success and integrity of the acts of the National Executive, and of his fraternal sympathy with the objects of the present festival. He resumed his seat amid loud applause.

THIRD TOAST—Religious Liberty; the basis of true freedom; the free exercise of God's holiest gift.

Rev. Dr. RAPHALL responded. In rising to do so, he said, before this assemblage, composed of some of the wisest and best men in this State, he felt gratified at the sympathetic reception with which the toast was received. He spoke of the moral, social, and intellectual benefits which a free, full, and untrammeled liberty of conscience conferred on the community; and asserted that all the higher and nobler feelings of the human heart died and perished wherever freedom of conscience was denied. He could no more compel himself to believe that which was repugnant to reason, than he could compel a man who abhorred him to love him.

He reason on earth had suffered more for conscience's sake than the Israelites, and Rome had afforded a more striking example of the fact that, whether under ANTIOCHUS the madman, or NICHOLAS, the ruffian, faith, like love, could not be called forth by compulsion and persecution for religion's sake only strengthened the feelings which it was intended to annihilate. That race was among the first to lay down their lives on the altars of religious liberty, to prove that the lofty hope was more powerful than the crushing reality, and to teach the first lesson of religious liberty, that truth is more precious than life, and that they loved God more than they feared man.

The Reverend gentleman spoke at length, and with obvious effect, against religious proscription of any character or against any class, and concluded by a forcible appeal for support to the institution whose foundation stone had assembled to celebrate.

He was listened to with marked attention, and sat down amid warm and prolonged applause.

FOURTH TOAST—The Governor, Lieut. Governor and Legislature of the State of New-York. [Applause.]

The President said he had the pleasure of stating that the Lieutenant Governor was present and would respond to this toast.

Hon. HENRY J. RAYMOND, in rising to respond, was received with vehement and reiterated applause. When silence was restored, he said:

Mr. PRESIDENT: While I shall not attempt to do anything more, it would certainly be unpardonable for me to do anything less, than make my sincere acknowledgments for the sentiment to which this large assembly of female beauty and manly worth has just given such kind response. [Applause.] It is certainly, Sir, most proper, that, upon such an occasion as this, the civil State, and all who, at any time, or in any capacity, may be called upon to speak in her behalf, should remember with gratitude and profound acknowledgment, not only compliments bestowed upon them at the festive board, but the substantial works of charity and benevolence in in which you are engaged. For are you not doing the work, and discharging the responsibilities, of the State herself? Does it not, of right, belong to the State, as such, in her civil capacity, to take care of the destitute and friendless who dwell within her borders? Is it not her duty, rather than that of the voluntary associations whose religious faith identity of origin and of race, and other accidents may bring together, to care for the orphans who know no other mother—and can find no other friend in the hour of their distress? Never can the State feel too grateful to those who assume this duty on her behalf, and who hitherto have performed it so much better than she could have done it herself. [Applause.] I congratulate you, Sir, upon the cheering prospect you have made—upon the completion of your beautiful edifice, and upon the large contributions to your funds already announced. And while you have vindicated your claim to liberality of sentiment by throwing open to all denominations the gates of your temple of mercy, permit me to express the hope that you may never be compelled to go beyond the limits of your own communion for the objects of your benevolence, and that you may find in ours, not only accessions to your numbers, but large and liberal contributions to your funds. [Loud applause.] And, speaking not from position, but from experience, I think I can say, that none as the Legislature of this great, rich and liberal State is concerned, you will never find there any indifference to your works or your worth, or any reluctance in extending to you what they have so freely accorded to all other denominations,—full and timely aid to their institutions of charity and benevolence. (Protonged applause.)

FIFTH TOAST—America; The Land of our Birth and of our Adoption—In the vanguard of the Western march of Empire, may she ever hold her high position, spite of the jealousies and selfish aims of narrow-minded and misguided men.

ALBERT CARDOZO, Esq., in a neat and appropriate speech, replied. He expressed his sympathy with the principle of absolute religious and political freedom for all, and congratulated himself on the fact that in this land where, in theory, at least, and generally speaking in practice, that principle was most fully recognized, he had the honor to be born.

SIXTH TOAST—The Mayor, and the constituted Authorities of the City of New-York.

SEVENTH TOAST—The Memory of Judah Touro—The Israelite whose benevolence recognized no difference in faith nor place.

HENRY MORRISON, Esq., responded in a lengthened and liberal speech.

SIMEON DRAPER, Esq., in a few brief and pointed remarks, which were vehemently applauded, replied to the next toast:

The Benevolent Societies of New-York—However separated by race or creed, they are co-heirs of mercy—twin-sisters of charity.

The remaining toasts were then proposed, as follows:

8. The Bench and the Bar—Republicanism, more than any other form of Government, needs upright Judges and honest Lawyers.

10. The Press—The interpreter of popular thought; the register of public opinion.

11. The Army and Navy of the United States.

12. The Ladies.

In the intervals between the delivery of the closing speeches, contributions to the Hospital were received and announced by the members of the Executive Committee. The aggregate of moneys collected, which ranged from individual subscriptions of $100 to $5, amounted, propably, to nearly $7,000.

The representatives of the Press are under special obligations to Mr. G. SUMNERS for his friendly attentions and courtesy.

About 10 o'clock the ladies and gentlemen retired to the ball-room, and there kept up the pleasures of the dance until an early hour.

The Legislative Committee on Criminal Affairs.

We have been furnished with a copy of a resolution of the late Assembly, by the Chairman of the Committee which was appointed to inquire into the criminal affairs of our City. This will be a very important investigation, and the community will look forward to their proceedings with considerable interest.

Annexed is the official notice of the first meeting on the part of the Assembly Committee. The Senatorial Committee on the same subject have not yet issued their notice.

STATE OF NEW-YORK, ASSEMBLY CHAMBERS, ALBANY, April 14, 1855.

Resolved (if the Senate concur,) That a Committee of Three from the House, and Two from the Senate, be appointed to visit the City of New-York and the city of Brooklyn; and that the Committee have power to send for persons and papers, for the purpose of ascertaining the mode of procedure in the Criminal Courts, office of the Chiefs of the Police Station-houses, Penitentiary, Almshouse and City Prison, in said cities; and that they report to the next Legislature, what, if any, further legislation is necessary for the suppression and punishment of crime, and the better protection of persons charged with crime.

Resolved, That the Senate concur.

E. G. SHERMAN, Clerk.

Resolved, That the Senate concur.

In Senate, April 12, 1855.

H. J. HASTINGS, Clerk of the Senate.

Notice is hereby given, that the Committee appointed by the above resolution will meet on the first Monday of June, at the office of T. STUYVESANT, No. 20 Chambers-street, in the City of New-York, at 4 o'clock P. M.

Dated May 17, 1855. T. STUYVESANT.

Tammany Society—Election of Councils Officers.

The Council of Tritons of the Tammany Society made a second and a successful effort to elect officers for the ensuing year, last night. On the twelfth ballot for "Father of the Council," Wm. D. KENNEDY received 7 votes, DANIEL E. DELAVAN, 4; ANSON BURLINGAME, 1; Mr. CLARK, and Mr. KENNEDY was accordingly declared elected. LORENZO B. SHEPARD was elected "Grand Sachem" on the first ballot, receiving nine out of the thirteen votes cast. JAMES B. HAUSHEARNOUREN was chosen Scribe. The Young American ticket, it will thus be seen, was triumphant.

American Institute Farmers' Club.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

DEAR SIR: Inasmuch as you are accustomed to report the proceedings of the Farmers' Club, I deemed it proper to request you to inform the public that its meetings are open to all, and that farmers from any portion of the Union, or any persons interested in agriculture, have a perfect right to attend and give their experience, or any facts in relation to the subjects before the Club, which may have fallen under their observation. It is especially desirable that the numbers of persons in attendance should be increased, although the meetings are now larger than could be expected under the circumstances. Much valuable information is elicited, which is especially useful at this time when the country is almost on the eve of suffering for the want of food.

The meetings of the Farmers' Club are held every Tuesday at the rooms of the American Institute, No. 351 Broadway. No fees are required to entitle any one to the privilege of membership. I am more particularly desirous you should give this publicity from the fact that I have met persons within a few days who are desirous of attending the sessions of the Club, but who had understood from some source that they were exclusive.

The "cultivation of grapes both in the open air and in the grapery," "raising of root crops," and other subjects of equal importance, will occupy the attention of the Club on Tuesday next, at 12 o'clock.

Respectfully yours,
HENRY C. VAIL.

Danger of keeping Flower Pots in Upper Windows.

A singular and nearly fatal accident occurred in the rear of house No. 94 Rose-street, Thursday afternoon, by the falling of a flower pot from a third story window, which in its descent struck a young woman, (who at the time was washing in the yard immediately underneath the window,) prostrating her to the ground, and inflicting a frightful gash in the front part of her head. Medical attendance was immediately summoned, who pronounced the wound dangerous, though not fatal. This should be a caution to those keeping flower pots unsecured in windows at an elevated position, more especially in houses occupied by tenants who generally have children playing in fronts of houses. Indeed, there should be an ordinance passed to that effect.

TO TRAVELERS.—A WORD BEFORE STARTING.—RAY'S ZEPHYR MERINO UNDER GARMENTS are predominantly conducive to the health and comfort of all travelers. The Buffalo Democracy speaks in terms of glowing eulogy of LORENZO FRENCH of that city, who has, during the forty years that he has served in that capacity, buried twenty-six thousand persons in the several Cemeteries of the city.

James Montgomery.

JAMES MONTGOMERY's habits of writing had few romantic concomitants. His study was a "small back room of a large building in the centre of the town, and looking immediately upon one of the meanest masses of dead brick walls in Sheffield; from its windows he could see none of the fine scenery in the neighborhood, that might serve even to remind him in Summer of pastoral Alpine landscapes, or in Winter of falling avalanches,—of the cottages, the lakes, or the waterfalls of Switzerland at any season." Though given to solitary walks he was not always sad. He never smoked more than one pipe at night and sometimes omitted that. One of MONTGOMERY's first reviews was of that volume of MOORE's which had just occasioned the notorious duel with JEFFREY.

THOMAS MOORE, ci-devant THOMAS LITTLE, and soi-disant ANACREON, holds the strange opinion that reviewers are "accountable beings," though he writes as if he were neither accountable to God nor man. Our readers know what a tremendous risk one of the most formidable of our brethren has incurred by presuming to reprobate the publication of these poems,—less indeed as a personal crime than as a public nuisance. Unawed, however, by so awful a warning, and neither daring nor deprecating MR. MOORE's displeasure, we shall speak as freely of this gay volume as if the author were neither a man of honor nor a gentleman, but as sincere a scoundrel as the writer of this article has the courage to avow himself.

JEFFREY missed his mark, as usual, in the notice in the Edinburgh of The Wanderer in Switzerland, in 1807. We give a sample:

We took compassion upon Mr. MONTGOMERY on his first appearance, conceiving him to be some slender youth of seventeen, intoxicated with weak tea and the praises of sentimental ensigns, and other provincial literati, and tempted, in that situation, to commit a feeble outrage on the public, of which the recollection would be a sufficient punishment. A third edition, however, is too alarming to be passed over in silence; and though we are perfectly persuaded that in less than three years nobody will know the name of The Wanderer of Switzerland, or any of the other poems in this collection, still we think ourselves called on to interfere to prevent, as far as in us lies, the mischief that may arise from the intermediate prevalence of so distressing an epidemic.

Bounty-Land Scrip.—1. As a general rule, revolutionary bounty-land scrip is not distributable as personality, but descends to the heirs-at-law as real estate.

2. This rule of law is not changed by the provisions of the act of Aug 31, 1852, which permits scrip issuable by the United States in discharge of military land warrants of the State of Virginia, although such scrip be made assignable by endorsement, and deliverable, when a minor or feme coverte is entitled, to the guardian or husband.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

Abstract of Orders, Directions, &c.—The following is an abstract of some of the important letters recorded in the Secretary's office, May 16:

Collector of New-York—Authorized to admit to free entry certain articles imported for the use of the English and Spanish Ministers.

D. L. Wing, Albany—Informed that the article termed "mill feed" is entitled to free entry when imported into the United States direct from the British Provinces.

United States Consul at Halifax—Stating that the proper disposition to be made of the papers of American vessels arriving at the ports of foreign countries, is to deposit them with the Consul of the nation to which said vessels belong, to enable said Consul to exercise the necessary jurisdiction, &c.

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.—The Commander-in-Chief has relieved Brigadier General M. I. LOCKWOOD, and appointed Col. WM. A. SCHUYLER as his successor.

CANAL DEPARTMENT—BREAK ON THE BLACK RIVER CANAL.—The following dispatch has been received today by the Auditor:

BOONVILLE, Tuesday, May 15, 1855.

HON. WM. I. CORNWELL—Dear Sir—There was a break occurred this morning, between 8 and 9 o'clock, on the Black River Canal, two miles south of Port Leyden, carrying away about sixty-five feet of the bank and twelve feet below canal bottom. It will take about three days to repair. It is so near the north end of the Canal that we now use, that it does not injure navigation but a very little. Yours with respect,

JAMES McEACHRON, Sup't.
